Registration for the twentieth summer session of the University began on July 5, and on July 10 there were 1,052 students registered. Of these 103 were in the summer school in agriculture. The total registration this year is about a hundred more than a year ago. The faculty numbers 99.

Governor Dix, under the authority conferred upon him by the latest amendment to the charter of the University, has appointed Frank H. Miller, M. D., of New York City, a member of the Board of Trustees of Cornell University for a term of five years. Dr. Miller last year gave a special course of lectures at the Veterinary College. He succeeds as trustee Almon R. Eastman, whose term expired in June.

With a large force of men the contractors are pushing work on the grading of the varsity section of Alumni Field. They started in on the football field, which will occupy the upper terrace on the western slope of Kite Hill, directly south of the Playground, the place where tennis courts were constructed a year ago. The courts were dismantled after Commencement, and new ones will be laid out on some other part of the field. By the time the University reopens in the fall the rough grading of the football field should be completed. The baseball field will occupy the lower terrace, nearer East Avenue.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees held on July 3, the following appointments were made for the year 1911-12: Alexander C. Stevens '07 and William C. Ballard '10 to be instructors in electrical engineering; Hubert E. Baxter '10 to be instructor in architecture; Maurice H. Givens (3 Med.) to be instructor in biochemistry; C. E. Carpenter '12 to be assistant in physical culture; William B. Flannery, V. C. Ryder and H. J. Tillou to be assistant librarians in the law library.

On the nomination of the Faculty of Law, the Boardman Senior Law Scholarship for the year 1911-12 has been awarded to Cedric Aylwin Major of Brooklyn. This scholarship, of the value of $100, was founded by Judge Douglas Boardman, the first dean of the college, and is awarded annually in June to the junior who has, in the judgment of the faculty, done the best and most satisfactory work in law subjects to the end of his junior course. Major is one of the editors of the Sun and is a member of Delta Upsilon.

Abraham Abraham, the Brooklyn merchant, who died at Alexandria Bay on June 28, was a benefactor of Cornell University. In 1902 he bought and presented to the University the Egyptological library of the late August Eisenlohr, who had been professor of Egyptology at Heidelberg. This collection of nearly 1,000 volumes, comprising complete sets of all the leading Egyptological periodicals, many costly facsimiles of Egyptian papyri, and all the important works on Egyptian history, archaeology and philology, is one of the most important and valuable units of the University Library. Mr. Abraham's son, Lawrence Abraham, is a member of the class of 1895.

Among the papers and manuscripts bequeathed by the late Goldwin Smith to his secretary, Arnold Haultain, there was found a manuscript diary kept by Goldwin Smith during his first visit to America in 1864, the existence of which the writer had evidently forgotten. This book the University has purchased, Mr. Haultain retaining the right of publication. Goldwin Smith landed in Boston, visited the historian Bancroft at Newport, and went with him to the centenary of Brown University at Providence. Thence he went to New York and then traveled westward, by way of Albany, visiting Chicago and Dubuque. He returned through Canada to New York and then went to Washington, where he stayed with Mr. Seward; visited Fortress Monroe and army camps near Washington; and talked with President Lincoln, General Grant, Secretary Stanton and other Union leaders. He jotted down in his diary his impressions by the way, observations of the towns, the country and the people, memoranda of conversations, and the like matter, during several months of travel.

By his will the late Professor Hiram Corson gave to the University at least a thousand of his books. The gift includes his collection of Anglo-Saxon, Semi-Saxon, Middle English and Gothic books, his collection of dictionaries dating from the sixteenth to the middle of the nineteenth century, and all books of any value treating of the English language. The Cowper collections are to become the property of the University, along with the original deed, on parchment, of the transfer of the assignment of the poet Southey's "Life and Works of William Cowper," including two signatures of Cowper; also a sketch, from nature, of Olney, Bucks, the residence of Cowper; five books of sonnets, etc., by William Hayley, Cowper's biographer, all in his own handwriting, and the works of Hayley in the Cowper collection. The will provides that these books are to remain in Cascadilla Cottage, the testator's home, as long as his son, Dr. Eugene R. Corson '75, uses it for a summer residence. Except for this bequest to the University and the sum of $500 bequeathed to Professor Corson's housekeeper, the son inherits all the property.

Work has begun on the foundations of Rand Hall, the new building for the Sibley shops.

DIRECTOR BAILEY RESIGNS.Wishes to Retire from Teaching and Administration.

Professor L. H. Bailey has tendered to the Board of Trustees his resignation as director of the New York State College of Agriculture. He has made no public statement about the matter except to admit that it is his intention to retire from teaching. Professor Bailey has been an exceedingly busy man for a good many years, and of late he has had a heavy burden of administration on his shoulders. To some of his friends he has told of a desire to free himself from this burden and to live his own life, indulging his taste for study and writing. He has been teaching since 1883, when, a year after his graduation from the Michigan Agricultural College—a year spent as assistant to Asa Gray—he was appointed professor of horticulture and landscape gardening at Lansing. He came to Cornell as professor of horticulture in 1888, and in 1903 he succeeded Professor Roberts as head of the college of agriculture. Under his administration the college has grown wonderfully, and he has found time for the writing of many books. Bailey's books on gardening are known the world over. He knows the subject, and he puts his own wise humor into what he writes, so that the result is pretty good reading. The trustees will not be able to fill Professor Bailey's place, and nothing has been done about appointing a successor.

The report of the Board of Directors being called for, G. W. Harris '73 reported a resolution adopted by the Board providing that the Secretary of the Association should cause the minutes of the Annual Meeting to be published in the Cornell Alumni News each year, and providing that this should be the official publication of the minutes.

On behalf of the Committee appointed to revise the statutes relating to the election of Alumni Trustees to fill vacancies caused by resignation or death, Edwin H. Woodruff '88 submitted the following report:

To the Associate Alumni of Cornell University: Your Committee appointed at the annual meeting in June, 1910, to revise, and submit to the Association a revision of, the statutes relating to the election of alumni trustees to fill vacancies caused by resignations or deaths, reports as follows:

I. Your Committee recommends that subdivision two of section 1121 of the Education Law be amended as follows: That, after "the alumni of said University shall meet annually in Ithaca, on the day before commencement," there be inserted "unless the trustees of the university, or its executive committee, shall fix for said annual meeting, some other day within the six days immediately preceding or following commencement day;"

II. That subdivision three of section 1121 of the Education Law be amended as follows: That after "Forthwith after such first day of April a list of such candidates shall be mailed by said treasurer to each of the alumni at his address," there be inserted "Such list shall state the vacancies, if any, then existing in the alumni membership of the board of trustees; and the vacancies that will occur by expiration of term at the next ensuing commencement."

III. That subdivision three of section 1121 of the Education Law be amended as follows: That after "The candidates to the extent of the number of places to be filled having the highest number of votes upon the first ballot shall be declared elected, provided that each of said candidates has received the votes of at least one-third of all the alumni voting at said election" there be inserted "Of the alumni trustees thus elected, the two receiving the highest number of votes shall fill the vacancies occurring by expiration of term; the others thus elected shall be allotted to fill vacancies, if any, existing otherwise than by expiration of term; the order of allotment to be in the order of the number of votes cast, the candidate receiving the higher number of votes to be allotted to the longer unexpired term;"

IV. That subdivision three of Section 1121 of the Education Law be amended as follows; That at the end of said subdivision three, there be added "If any vacancy occur in the alumni membership of the board of trustees between the last day fixed herein for the filing of nominations with the university treasurer, and the time of the annual meeting of the alumni, herein provided for, then such vacancy shall not be filled for the unexpired term until the next following year, and shall then be filled by nomination and election in the manner hereinbefore prescribed for the election of alumni trustees."

MYNDERSE VAN CLEEF.
E. H. WOODRUFF.

The report was adopted.

On the motion of Charles H. Blood '88, a committee was appointed consisting of J. F. Murtaugh '98, E. H. Woodruff '88 and Mynderse Van Cleef '74, to secure the enactment of the legislation recommended.

C. H. Blood '88 submitted a verbal report on behalf of the Trustees' Alumni Field Committee.

R. T. Mickle '92 submitted a report on behalf of the general committee regarding the reorganization of the by-laws of the Associate Alumni. These by-laws were submitted in print, and after a discussion they were adopted. [They are appended hereto.]

Miscellaneous business being in order, G. L. Burr '81 presented resolutions in memory of the late Professor Hiram Corson. These resolutions were adopted and ordered spread on the minutes, and the Secretary was directed to send a copy to the family:

"As we come together for this our annual meeting, we are grieved to learn of the death, on the very eve of Commencement Week, of that Nestor among our old teachers, Professor Hiram Corson. No other has numbered among his hearers so large a proportion of all who have studied at Cornell. His person and his voice, familiar to us all, have grown and will remain an inseparable part of our university memories. We rejoice that to such fullness of years his life has been spared us, and we here record our lasting gratitude for all we owe him as interpreter and inspirer."

W. W. Rowlee '88 moved that the Association appoint a delegate to a conference to be called in the fall to consider the rearrangement of Commencement Week. The resolution was adopted and the President appointed Woodford Patterson '95.

E. A. deLima '86 moved the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, there now exist throughout the country various clubs and associations of Cornell Alumni organized for the purpose of perpetuating the relations and friendships of undergraduate years and forwarding the interests of the University, and

Whereas, it is believed that these ends would be furthered by a closer association of such organizations,

Resolved, that the President appoint a committee of five to consider ways and means of securing a closer relationship of such organizations to each other and to the Associate Alumni and to report on same at the next annual meeting, and to prepare a skeleton form of by-laws for associations hereafter created.

The President appointed as such committee A. W. Berresford '93, W. W. Rowlee '88, H. D. Mason '00, W. G.

Ogden '01 and Willard Beahan '78.

Charles H. Blood '88 read the joint report of J. H. Edwards and himself as retiring Alumni Trustees. [The report is appended hereto.]

The report of the nominating committee was made by G. W. Harris '73, as follows:

President, J. A. Holmes '81.

Vice-presidents, Fox Holden '72, John N. Ostrom '77, H. M. Dibble '82, Horace White '87, G. W. Bacon '92, Miss F. A. Kellor '97, Ralph S. Kent '02, W. J. Dugan '07.

Corresponding Secretary, H. H. Wing '81.

Recording Secretary, W. W. Rowlee '88.

Treasurer, S. E. Banks '95.

Board of Directors, E. H. Woodruff '88; H. D. Schenck '82 (Term expires 1914.)

Canvassing Board, C. L. Crandall '72, C. S. Northup '93.

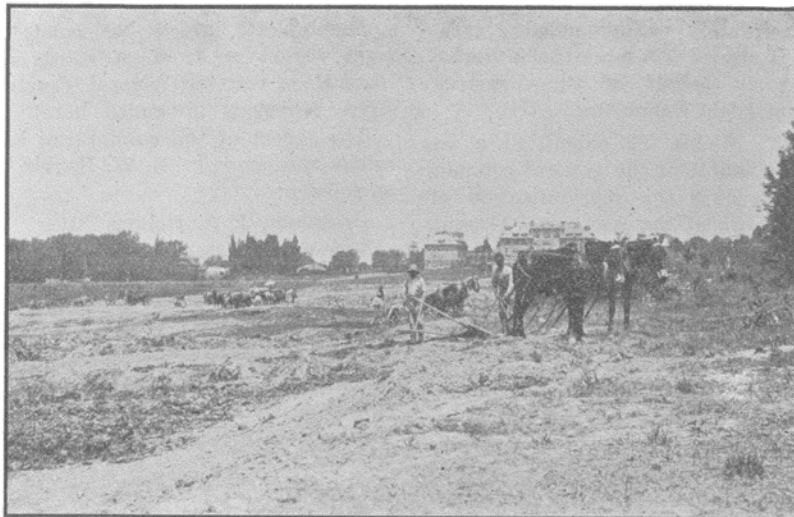

Auditing Committee, R. H. Treman '78, E. T. Turner '83, and C. D. Bostwick '92.

The report was accepted and a motion was made that the secretary cast the ballot of the Association for the nominations as then made. This motion was carried. The Secretary cast the ballot, and the President declared the nominees of the committee the officers of the Associate Alumni for one year.

B. S. Monroe '96 moved under Section 20, Article 5, of the by-laws just adopted, that the following persons be elected a committee on nominations for the ensuing year: F. S. Porter '00, H. D. Schenck '82, R. T. Mickle '92, N. T. Horr '82, G. J. Tansey '88, G. W. Harris '73, V. A. Moore '87, E. S. Shepherd '02, W. G. Ogden '01.

George B. Turner '73 moved, and it was seconded and carried that the Secretary cast the ballot of the Association for the above named committee. The President designated H. D. Schenck as chairman.

Mrs. Willard Beahan '78 addressed the chair on the subject of representation of the women graduates of the University on the Board of Trustees. She said that the women graduates were not disheartened by the defeat of their candidate this year; that they believed the increasing importance in the University of the department of home economics warranted them in renewing their efforts to elect a woman trustee, and that they appealed to the men, without whose votes it could not be accomplished, to assist in giving the women this representation.

The meeting was then adjourned.

ALUMNI TRUSTEES' REPORT.

To The Associate Alumni of Cornell University: At few times in the history of Cornell University are the outward manifestations of growth and prosperity more apparent than at the present time. The coming year will witness the erection upon its campus of five new halls of instruction at a cost exceeding $600,000, and the erection of the Prudence-Risley Hall, a residence for women; at a cost of approximately $300,000.

The circumstance is alluded to not to gratify the pride of the Alumni of Cornell, to whom this report is presented, but to instill into their mind a realization of their responsibilities to their alma mater. It is not the buildings and material equipment which constitutes a university, but it is the complete organization which can provide liberal and practical education for its students in the several pursuits and professions of life, and by its investigations and contributions to human knowledge, raise the standards of living in our civilization.

The most discouraging circumstance that confronts your representatives on the Board of Trustees lies in the fact that they cannot adequately comply with the requisitions of the heads of the different colleges and departments of the University for appropriations which are considered necessary to secure and retain the services of the most competent investigators, professors and instructors without expenditures for maintenance beyond the income of the university from its endowment. Are the trustees justified in accumulating for the purpose of maintenance a deficit which can only result in the impairment of the capital of the University?

As a business proposition there can be but one answer to the query. The accumulated deficit, as reported on August 1st, 1910, was $104,572.46.

The ranking of a university will be determined ultimately by the efficiency of the work which is the object of its existence.

The Alumni may be justly proud of the standing of the University in the past. The requirements for admission have been gradually raised. Only college graduates are admitted to our Medical College. Certain preliminary college training is now required for admission to the professional courses of law and engineering. These circumstances would naturally tend to reduce the number of applicants for admission, and yet the total number of students in attendance in the university has constantly increased. With the tendency to lower rates of interest in the business world, and the consequent reduction of income from invested capital, with the increase in the number of students and the constantly increased cost of maintenance of our growing college equipment, one of two results is inevitable. Our standards of instruction must deteriorate or some means must be devised to increase our income. Already it has been pointed out that the number of instructors and assistants receiving lower salaries has been increased out of proportion to the number of full professors. More time is demanded from the heads of departments for administrative work at the expense of scholarly work and research. Able men who desire and are deserving of promotion and higher salaries are drawn to other institutions, and the result is reflected in the fact that two-thirds of the leading universities have greater ratio of graduates inspired to pursue research work to the total registration than has Cornell.

The remedy must lie largely with the loyal body of Cornell Alumni. Do they not owe an obligation to their Alma Mater?

It is interesting to note that, based on the report of the Treasurer for 1910, the total income from tuition and all fees of students in the University from all sources in Ithaca, in the Medical College in New York, and in the State Colleges at Ithaca was $483,084.34.

The total expense for the maintenance of the University for the year, after deducting all expenses for new buildings, was $1,544,274.64.

In short, the students paid directly but thirty-one and one third (31 1-3) per cent. of the actual cost of their education. The balance represented the generosity of the Cornells, the Sages, the Sibleys, the Goldwin Smiths, the Andrew D. Whites and many others interested in the welfare of their fellow men; the contributions by the state to the cause of education; the heart breaking struggle of the men who devoted the best of their lives to the welfare of the University in the days of its formative period, and, last but not least, the loyalty of the professorial and instructing corps of the university, who, fitted beyond most others by their personal abilities and education to gain the financial prizes of the world, have devoted themselves and their lives on inadequate salaries to the cause of education and research for the benefit of their fellow men.

STORY OF THE RACE.

One of Cornell's greatest victories in rowing was won at Poughkeepsie on June 27. It was an unusual sort of Cornell aquatic victory, because it was won, not "on form" and early in the race, but by a last desperate effort, right at the finish, taking the winning place from a crew that had seemed, for three miles and half, to be better in every way. Columbia's varsity eight gave Cornell a race that will be remembered.

There was a great Cornell crew in 1901, when the present record of 18:53 1-5 for the Poughkeepsie four-mile course was made. There was another remarkable crew four years later, when Cornell finished alone, a quarter of a mile from the nearest contestant. And there have been other great Cornell crews. But, thanks to the coaching of Courtney, pluck has not often been an apparent factor in Cornell crew victories; most of his eights have been so finished that the men have not been called on to "row themselves out"—so finished that their success has redounded more to the credit of their teacher than of themselves. But here is a Cornell eight that used all of the Courtney training, and then, in a crisis, added something of its own. Every one of the victorious crews of past years owes something now to Kimball and Bowen and the rest of the eight of 1911, which had the spunk to defeat a Columbia crew its equal if not its superior in form. The value of every past Cornell rowing victory, however easy it may have seemed, is increased by this exhibition of spirit.

For the victory was fairly earned. It was not due, as some accounts of the race have indicated, to the collapse of one or more men in the Columbia boat. Cornell's final spurt had cut down all of Columbia's lead, and the men from Cayuga Lake were still spurting, when that collapse came. It was the sudden loss of their apparently commanding lead that broke down Columbia's endurance.

Columbia's victory in the freshman race had greatly increased the confidence of Columbia men in their varsity eight, and their confidence reached the boiling point when, at the beginning of the big race, the Blue and White went to the front within the first fifty yards. This lead had increased to half a length over Cornell at the quarter-mile, but at the first mile post Columbia and Cornell were on even terms, a brief spurt by Commodore Kimball's men having cut down the lead of the New Yorkers. The other crews were already practically out of the race. Columbia dropped the stroke to 32, while Cornell, rowing a steady 34, slowly fell behind. It was unusual for a Cornell varsity eight to see a rival take the lead in such fashion, and something new for Coxswain Kimball to see another setting the pace for him. But, after a second brief spurt, which apparently satisfied him that his men had plenty in reserve, he reduced the stroke again to 34, and let Columbia get a full length on him. There Cornell hung on, except at the bridge, where the Columbia men in the observation train yelled for "open water" and Kimball let the Columbia crew draw ahead a few feet further. For another half mile Kimball waited, and for a quarter of a mile on top of that. Then, a few hundred yards from the finish, with yells of "Columbia wins!" coming from the observation train, Kimball called for a "twenty." He ordered the Cornell crew to pull twenty fast strokes with all the power they had in them. "Rosy" Bowen, the stroke, says he didn't know whether the crew had anything left, but he "dug in." The Cornell shell gained several feet at every pull. The sixteenth stroke of the "twenty" brought the boat up even with Columbia, and at that instant Bowen, glancing athwart as he finished his drive, saw E. W. Sage, the Columbia bow oarsman, fall limply forward and drop his oar. There was a sudden check to the Columbia boat, and Cornell shot ahead and crossed the finish line almost two lengths to the good. The Columbia crew made a game effort to recover, but Sage's collapse had taken the pace out of the boat, and although he tried to resume rowing he was a dead weight in the bow. Columbia finished several lengths ahead of Pennsylvania, which beat Wisconsin by a few feet, with Syracuse away behind.

In the race of varsity fours Syracuse made a fast getaway but was soon overhauled by Columbia, which led for half a mile. The Cornell four spurted and was leading by a length at the mile. Near the finish Syracuse passed Columbia. Cornell won by three-quarters of a length, and Syracuse had even less than that over Columbia. Pennsylvania was several lengths behind.

Coach Rice had developed a fine Columbia freshman crew, and it had little difficulty in winning. The Columbia youngsters jumped into the lead and were never headed. Cornell's freshmen took second place after a struggle with Syracuse, and Pennsylvania was right up with these two, making the fight for second place a pretty one. The pace was too fast for the Wisconsin freshmen. Mr. Courtney had shown, by his shake-up of the freshman eight just before they left Ithaca, that he was pretty thoroughly dissatisfied with their work since the Harvard race. They were not thought to have much chance at Poughkeepsie, and considering everything, their success in finishing second to Columbia was a creditable performance.

Pennsylvania's varsity eight was handicapped by the loss of Reath, the regular stroke, who was disabled by an injury late in the season, and Wisconsin had been troubled with sickness among the men. There was a close race between these two crews for third place. Better luck to them both next time!

Columbia has shown her appreciation of the work of Rice by raising his salary and giving him a ten-year contract. Their good showing this year will give rowing at Columbia a boom, and next year's Cornell varsity will have to look out. Kimball has graduated, and his stimulating generalship will not be available. All the eight will be eligible. After the regatta they elected Bowen, the stroke, Commodore for next year.

There were not many students in Ithaca when the crews returned from Poughkeepsie, but the oarsmen were met at the train and escorted to the Ithaca Hotel, where they were entertained at a dinner given them by business men of Ithaca. Then they packed the shells away in the boathouse and said goodby to the "Old Man."

An addition of $375,000 to the University's endowment is worth notice. That is what the Alumni Fund amounts to. The contributions to the University by alumni through the Cornellian Council amounted in June to $18,700 annually. This sum is just about equal to what an endowment of $375,000 would yield in interest at five per cent. And this is the fruit of a single year's work. The fund will continue to grow until it becomes a factor of no small importance in the University's income. It will grow by an increase in the number of subscribers, which is now about 1700. There are many Cornellians not included in that number who are now helping to pay for the equipment of Alumni Field, and who may be expected, when that job is completed, to become subscribers to the general fund.

The secretary of the Cornellian Council has received a letter from a Cornell man in Lahore, India. The writer says that there are two Cornell men in that city. They are both engaged in missionary work and find pressing needs there for all the money they can give. But they both sympathize with the purpose of the Alumni Fund and desire to contribute something. The writer therefore, in behalf of both of them, sends a money order for £2. "We hope," he says, "that the alumni of Cornell will respond loyally to your appeal."

Our Baseball Team.

Taking into consideration the work of the various college teams on the diamond throughout the season, Cornell appears to have the call for the title of baseball leadership. The work of the Cornell squad throughout the season has been consistent. They have displayed playing ability of a high grade, not depending on any one star to pull them through, but mainly through fine work in all departments of the game.—Boston Post.

The Cornell team has a valid claim to be rated as the best college nine for the season of 1911, on the form shown in the two games played on Franklin Field. They excel in every respect.—Old Penn Weekly Review.

An expedition to Newfoundland in the interest of the Gray Herbarium, Harvard University, under the direction of Professor Fernald, left Boston on June 30. Professor Fernald is accompanied by Professor Karl M. Wiegand (Cornell '94), of Wellesley College, and others. Headquarters will be at Grand Falls on the Exploits River, and the explorations will be chiefly on the northeast coast of the island, thus supplementing the former explorations of Professors Fernald and Wiegand on the northwest coast.

An Apology in Verse.

To the Editor of the Alumni News: When the other day I came to look over my examination papers for the term I found among those in answer to the questions on the revival of letters and of art (the topic as to which a saucy student once dubbed the outlines "the ones with eighty dagoes to a page") a paper which bore only the following verses. They are too good not to be shared; and it is perhaps safer to share them with alumni than with undergraduates.

The questions were: (1) What humanists did Pope Nicholas gather at Rome, and what did he do with them? (2) Name the humanist friends of Lorenzo de' Medici, briefly characterizing each and his work. (3) Tell what you can of Michelangelo, of Leonardo da Vinci, of Titian.

And this is what I read (it must have been written and handed in within the hour):

"Scholar and pope, great Nicholas the Fifth,
Who were these gems that your tiara graced?
Who were the wise minds and the flashing souls
That for you gathered treasure-books of Greece,
That wrought their bright and never-dying dreams
Upon your altars and your chapel-walls?"

"Magnificent Lorenzo! you who caused
Florence to shine like the Augustan Rome,
Yea, raised her high as Athens in her pride,
Lorenzo, kind Lorenzo, be not now
The silent Sphinx, refusing to disclose
What Horaces to your Maecenas played!"

"And Leonardo, thou whom Vinci claims,
Sculptor and scientist, but most of all
Painter whose bones can die before his fame,
And thou of mighty arm and mighty will,
Dictator all thy days of lords and popes,
Son of the Buonarroti, yea, and thou,
Titian of lovely colors and fair forms,
Will ye not show, to one who humbly craves,
Some knowledge of your lives and works and days?"

"Ah silent, silent all! And in a whirl
Of names and great careers and thrilling times,
Of pictures, books, cathedrals, colors, shapes,
Of princes, lords, and popes and potentates,
Revolving, pondering, confusing all,
My little mind is silent, silent too."

It is perhaps only fair to add that the handwriting is strangely suggestive of that of the student who this year won the Guilford prize, and that this examination fell just about the time when the Guilford essays had to be handed in.

ASSOCIATE ALUMNI.

Cornell has now reached an age when very many of its Alumni have attained positions of wealth and competence. How much of that success is due to the training which they received in their college course none can directly estimate. Few of these Alumni but would repudiate the insinuation that their education was dependent upon the charity of others and yet the figures reveal the fact that such is the case.

There are generous men of wealth who will give a dormitory or a hall for instruction or to some specific object to which their attention is directed; but it is to the Alumni we must look for the annual subscriptions for general college purposes which is the pressing financial need today of Cornell University.

In Yale and Princeton hundreds of thousands of dollars are received annually in subscriptions from the Alumni.

Based on the Treasurer's report for 1910, the total expenditure for maintenance, $1,544,274.64, divided among the 4227 full year students represented an average annual expenditure by the university per student of $365.57, for which he paid the university thirty-one and one third (31 1-3) per cent. or $114.42, leaving a balance of $251.15 as the actual cost of his maintenance above the amount of his contributions.

If the total expenses of the university maintenance were apportioned among the students for the four years of their college course, it would be found, we anticipate, that the sum expended per student, over and above the income received from students, would approximate $1,000 per individual.

While it is true that generous contributions from the State to the Colleges of Agriculture and Veterinary Science are included in the estimate of moneys expended for maintenance, yet when it is remembered that students in the colleges maintained by the State pay no tuition whatever and constitute but a fraction of one per cent. of the inhabitants of the State, the moral obligations of the few beneficiaries of this public expenditure to the cause of education represented by their Alma Mater in its time of need is in no degree lessened. secure, in addition to the technical instruction in their particular colleges, the benefit of the instruction in the sciences and the humanities in the general departments of the University and the general atmosphere of culture which permeates a great university and the value of which cannot be underestimated in technical schools.

If, however, we eliminate, in our computations, the Agricultural and Veterinary Colleges supported by the State, we find the total amount received from tuition and fees aggregated $467,108.74, and the amount expended for maintenance, exclusive of expenditures for new buildings, aggregated $1,210,746.49, the students paying less than thirty-eight (38) per cent. of the actual cost of their education. The excess of the cost of maintenance over and above the amounts received from the students, divided among the 3588 full year students, not taking agriculture or veterinary medicine, represented an average sum expended for the individual student in addition to the amounts paid by him of $207.81 per individual or an aggregate in excess of $800 during his college course.

The obligation which rests upon the Alumni to contribute to the growing needs of the university has first taken permanent form in the organization of the Cornellian Council, to solicit contributions from the Alumni. We as representatives of the Alumni upon the Board of Trustees feel that we can render no greater service at the present time than to call to the attention of the Alumni the financial condition of the University, and ask the Alumni to give to the Cornellian Council their loyal and hearty co-operation in securing in some way the funds necessary to meet the needs of a great university.

The funds subscribed, unless donated to a specific purpose, are applicable to the general needs of the University. It is the function of the Board of Trustees to apportion the income according to the most pressing needs of the various colleges. An average contribution of but $10 per year by each alumnus would mean an additional income to the University of approximately $120,000 per year, and, based upon the life expectancy of each alumnus at the average age of graduation, would represent a contribution of only $155 in his lifetime as against the estimated sum of $800 to $1,000 expended for his benefit during his college course over and above the amount contributed by him in tuition and fees. A contribution of $50 per year from each alumnus, computed upon the same basis, would mean that each student would repay in yearly installments an aggregate about equivalent to the cost of his education over and above the amount paid by him in tuition and fees and such a contribution would mean an additional annual income to the university in excess of half a million dollars.

It would be futile in this report to attempt to point out the specific needs of the different departments and colleges. The annual published reports of the deans of the various colleges to the president and the reports of the president to the Board of Trustees but annually reveal the fact that Cornell possesses a corps of men who know and recognize the functions and needs of a well equipped university.

It is particularly interesting to note that during the past year the legislature of the State of New York has made appropriations for three of the buildings outlined in the ten year plan of development, and the difficult problem of locating the buildings required in the ten year plan, and which will involve an outlay by the State of eventually $2,000,000 has been settled by a relocation of the lands devoted to the purposes of athletics in a manner that has met the hearty approval of both the agricultural and athletic interests. Both are materially benefited and the demands and development of the future anticipated, but at an additional cost to the University in making possible the changes, of a sum which will necessitate the expenditure of many thousands of dollars, which it can ill afford to withdraw from its capital.

Studies are, at the present time, being made for a system of dormitories and a dining hall to meet a long felt want. A play ground for the women, a new dormitory, an addition to the College of Civil Engineering, an auditorium and an adequate gymnasium near Alumni Field, are mentioned as among the possibilities for the future; but the matter of primary importance is the securing of additional endowment and income for the maintaining of our educational standards of the future. That accomplished, the others will follow naturally and speedily, through the generosity of individuals who recognize the position which Cornell and Cornell trained men have taken and are taking in the educational and industrial world.

Clubs and associations may be deprived of the right to delegates or their number of delegates may be cut down in accordance with general rules to be formulated by the Directors, provided, that whenever such action is proposed, at least thirty (30) days' notice of the proposed action shall be given by the Secretary by mail to the last known officers of the club, as such officers and their addresses are shown by the records of the office of the Secretary.

All proceedings shall be conducted in the usual parliamentary manner.

SECTION 33. Effect of Decision at Forum. Alumni Notes.

'77, B. S.—The George Washington University has conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine on Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the Bureau of Entomology and permanent secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, for "distinguished services to science in relation to preventive medicine."

'83—Harry Irving Miller, who was a student in civil engineering at Cornell for one year (1879-80), was elected to be one of the vice-presidents of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company when that company was reorganized recently. He will be located in New York City as George J. Gould's confidential assistant in the management of the company's affairs in the East. Mr. Miller has been president of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railroad and its allied lines. The New York World says that some of his friends have called him "the cocktail of the railroad business" because he is a great rehabilitator. During the last eighteen months, while acting as receiver of the Buffalo & Susquehanna Railroad Company, he has increased the net earnings of that system from $30 to $1,000 a day, while he has changed the result of the Buffalo & Susquehanna Coal Company from a loss of $200,000 a year to a profit of $100,000 a year. Mr. Miller has also improved the net earnings of the Great Southern Lumber Company at the rate of nearly $2,000 a day. For his services to Japan during her present railroad expansion the Emperor decorated Mr. Miller with the Sacred Order of the Treasury.

'87, B. S.—Dr. Veranus A. Moore, director of the New York State Veterinary College, received the honorary degree of Doctor of Veterinary Medicine at the recent commencement of the University of Pennsylvania. The same university conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Science upon Professor Warren P. Laird, a member of the faculty of its department of architecture, who was a special student in architecture at Cornell in 1885-87.

'88, B. L.—H. C. Beauchamp, who was one of the founders of the Cornell Magazine and has been engaged in newspaper work since he graduated, is now the editor and publisher of the Jonesboro, Tenn., Advance, the first number of which appeared on June 15.

'88, Ph. B.—Princeton University at its recent commencement conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon John R. Mott. In investing Mr. Mott with the honor, Dean West described him as "honored by academic and religious bodies for his services in planning and extending the active Christian work of university students, deviser of national and international agencies for this work, particularly the World's Christian Student Federation; presiding leader in the World's Missionary Movement in Edinburgh in 1910, a traveller over four continents in search of room for work, a man of buoyant energy, deep consecration, astonishing success, a new Crusader bent on the Christian conquest of the world."

'90 G.—Associate Director J. C. M. Hanson of the University of Chicago Libraries, formerly chief of the catalogue division of the Library of Congress, gave an address before the Chicago Library Club on April 13 in the Chicago Public Library, on the subject "Organization of the Catalogue Division of the Library of Congress in 1897, and Its Subsequent Development."

'90, M. E.—George H. Ashley is state geologist of Tennessee, with headquarters in Nashville.

'90, LL. B.—John G. McDowell, of Elmira, has been appointed private secretary to Col. Joseph F. Scott, Superintendent of Prisons of the State of New York.

'91, A. B.—Clinton S. Marsh is superintendent of schools of Summit, N. J.

'91, M. E.—Philip J. Darlington is president of the Roto Company, Hartford, Conn.

'94, M. E.—O. P. Cummings is superintendent of construction with the A. B. See Electric Elevator Company, 220 Broadway, New York.
