
CONTRIBUTORS

A. L. Becker is an emeritus professor of Linguistics at the University of Michigan.

Fenella Cannell is a Reader in Social Anthropology, London School of Economics and Political Science.

Greg Fealy is a fellow and senior lecturer in Indonesian politics in the College of Asia and the Pacific at The Australian National University. He specializes in Islamic politics in Indonesia and transnational Islamist movements.

Vannessa Hearman is a doctoral candidate in the School of Historical Studies at the University of Melbourne. She is researching the experiences of 1965-related political prisoners in East Java and investigating how those experiences could contribute to a greater understanding of the area's political history. Her research interests include the use of memory and oral history in challenging or augmenting official histories.

Mary Somers Heidhues has taught at universities in the United States and Germany and is the author of, among other works, Golddiggers, Farmers, and Traders in the "Chinese Districts" of West Kalimantan, Indonesia (Ithaca, NY: Cornell Southeast Asia Program, 2003).

Michael Laffan, an assistant professor at Princeton University's department of history, specializes on the history of Islam in Southeast Asia and is currently working on a book on the creation of the idea of Indonesian Islam. His recent publications include "Another Andalusia: Images of Colonial Southeast Asia in Arabic Newspapers," Journal of Asian Studies 66,3 (2007): 689–722, and "National Crisis and the Representation of Traditional Sufism in Indonesia: The Periodicals Salafy and Sufi," in Sufism and the "Modern" in Islam, Julia Day Howell and Martin van Bruinessen, eds. (London: I. B. Tauris, pp. 149–71).

John Legge is an Emeritus Professor of Monash University, Australia. He was formerly Professor of History, 1960–1977, then Dean of Arts, 1978–1986. Currently he is a Research Associate of the Monash Centre of Southeast Asian Studies.

Anton Lucas is a member of the Flinders Asia Centre and the School of Politics and International Studies at Flinders University, Adelaide. His current research examines issues of environmental politics and development at the local level. He is the author of "'Berjuang Diatas Perahu': Livelihood, Contestation, and Declining Marine Resources on Java's North Coast," in Community, Environment, and Local Governance in Indonesia: Locating the Commonweal (Routledge, forthcoming).

Ruth McVey is Emeritus Reader in Southeast Asian Politics at the University of London. Among her principal publications are The Rise of Indonesian Communism (1965); Southeast Asian Transitions (1978); Southeast Asian Capitalists (1992); and Money and Power in Provincial Thailand (2000).

Priyambudi Sulistiyanto is a member of the Flinders Asia Centre and the School of Politics and International Studies at Flinders University, Adelaide. His research looks at grassroots reconciliation and local politics in post-Suharto Indonesia. His publications include Thailand, Indonesia, and Burma in Comparative Perspective (Aldershot, UK and Burlington, USA: Ashgate, 2002); and he is coeditor of Deepening Democracy in Indonesia: Direct Elections for Local Leaders (Pilkada) (Singapore: ISEAS, forthcoming).

Ronit Ricci received her PhD in Comparative Literature from the University of Michigan in 2006. Her dissertation was titled "Translating Conversion in South and Southeast Asia: The Islamic 'Book of One Thousand Questions' in Javanese, Tamil and Malay". She is currently a Postdoctoral Fellow at the Asia Research Institute, National University of Singapore.

John Roosa is an assistant professor of history at the University of British Columbia and is the author of Pretext for Mass Murder: The September 30th Movement and Suharto's Coup d'État in Indonesia (University of Wisconsin Press, 2006).

Jim Schiller is a member of the Flinders Asia Centre and the School of Politics and International Studies at Flinders University, Adelaide. His research focuses on local state-society relations, and the politics of elections. His recent publications include "Civil Society in Jepara: Fractious but Inclusive," in Relocating Boundaries: Local Politics in Post-Suharto Indonesia (KITLV, 2007), and "Electing District Heads in Indonesia: Democratic Deepening or Elite Entrenchment?" in Deepening Democracy in Indonesia: Direct Elections for Local leaders (Pilkada) (Singapore: ISEAS, forthcoming).

James T. Siegel is Professor of Anthropology at Cornell University, Ithaca, NY.

Scott Schlossberg is a PhD candidate in the department of South and Southeast Asian Studies at University of California–Berkeley. He is writing his dissertation on political imagination and the leftist literary movements of twentieth-century North India and Indonesia.