University to Expand Frozen Foods Research

ANNOUNCEMENT was made at the University May 14 of an extensive field study in the Ithaca region which is expected to lead the way to important improvements in human diet. The occasion was a two-day visit of Governor Thomas E. Dewey to the University and Ithaca, when he spoke at ceremonies dedicating a new community "Mother Zero" frozen foods locker plant, down-town. The new plant, built by the GLF Exchange and operated by Cooperative Producer & Consumer Family Foods, will, with other facilities including a slaughterhouse, bakery, restaurant, and food store, constitute a practical laboratory for the University's School of Nutrition for studies in food production, processing, distribution, and use in diet. The Governor's dedicatory address was broadcast by NBC.

Practical Field Study

At a luncheon given by the University in Willard Straight Hall for Governor Dewey, Director Leonard A. Maynard, PhD '15, of the School of Nutrition and H. Edward Babcock, chairman of the University Board of Trustees and organizer of the GLF Exchange, announced a great cooperative experiment in which the University, the State of New York, public utilities of the State, manufacturers of frozen foods equipment, and producers' and consumers' cooperative organizations will join to make the Ithaca community a practical field laboratory to improve human nutrition by use of frozen foods.

Professor Maynard cited the three years of research carried on by the School of Nutrition with a grant from the Consolidated Edison Co., in the agricultural, engineering, biochemical, and food laboratories of the University. These studies, he said, have begun with the selection of agricultural products best suited for freezing and have carried through to the preparation of frozen foods for the consumer's table. At the same time, the School has worked with family consumers, studying their experience, needs, and desires as to frozen food equipment and services, and has already begun to publish conclusions and recommendations.

Babcock spoke of the pioneer work on food freezing done by Professor Donald K. Tressler, PhD '18, at the Geneva Experiment Station and how with assistance from the GLF and some public utilities, work was started which produced the first commercially built farm freezer in the United States. Now, he said, the community facilities provided by the producer and consumer cooperatives will be augmented by the "saturation" of the Ithaca region, through cooperation of the manufacturers, with two-temperature refrigerators, zero storage chests, farm freezers, and bulk storage plants to be installed for study under actual conditions of use, with arrangements that the several thousand families involved will make available their experience in using frozen foods in their diets. In addition, he announced that all the public utilities of the State had joined with manufacturers of equipment and cooperatives to provide the University with a grant of $50,000 a year for at least three years, to be used for staff and publication of findings. He called attention to the recent appropriation by the State for special laboratory equipment and a new Department of Biochemistry in the College of Agriculture which also would further this project.

The results, Babcock said, give promise "of great national importance." He designated the plan as "the kind of cooperation which evolves from a simple formula: the application of research, education, and action to a common problem by the interested parties. It is the kind of teamwork which puts public welfare to the fore and which requires none of the cooperators to make any great sacrifice. Most important of all, it is the kind of teamwork which takes place where people live, rather than on paper. The fact that the government's place in it is to supplement rather than to regiment and dictate is the personal contribution of the Governor who is our honored guest today. Sometimes I like to speculate on what such a philosophy universally applied throughout America might do for this country."

GOVERNOR THOMAS E. DEWEY VISITS THE UNIVERSITY

At the men's dormitories with President Edmund E. Day and Captain Burton W. Chippendale, USN, commanding the Naval Training School, the Governor greets Midshipman Lawrence Michiels, USNR, (left), veteran of the Asiatic, European, and Pacific Theatres, who was commended by the Secretary of the Navy for landing under fire on an unknown beach of Tulagi in the Solomon Islands in August, 1942. The Governor was the house guest of President and Mrs. Day, and spent Sunday afternoon touring the Campus, followed by dinner with the Deans.

tween this new development of University activity and Ezra Cornell's famous dictum, "I would found an institution where any person can find instruction in any study." He reasoned that the Founder and President White intended that their University "must be prepared to follow the needs of the people wherever these arise and wherever they lead. The University's accentuation of interest in problems of human nutrition," he continued, "is a current illustration of this same conception of its responsibilities for both training and research. The production, processing, marketing, and consumption of an optimum diet for all classes of people has at all times an exceedingly important bearing upon human welfare. Right now, in our war-ridden world, it has become a concern of tremendous moment. We are making it here at Cornell a focus of all the resources of staff and facilities that we can bring to bear. The cooperation and support we are receiving from the State and from the several important organizations here represented leads us to believe that highly important results are in sure prospect. The outcome of the comprehensive program we have projected and are now pursuing will, I am confident, constitute an ultimate public service that will justify every effort and contribution we may be called upon to make."

Companies cooperating in the new frozen foods project, most of whom had representatives at the University luncheon, are Buffalo Niagara Electric Co., Carrier Corp., Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp., Central New York Power Corp., Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Cooperative P & C Family Foods, Inc., Cooperative Consumers Society of Ithaca, Cooperative GLF Exchange, Inc., Emil Steinhorst & Sons, Inc., Long Island Lighting Co., New York Power & Light Corp., New York State Electric & Gas Corp., Niagara Lockport & Ontario Corp., Philco Corp., Rochester Gas & Electric Corp., and Sears Roebuck & Co. Also attending the luncheon were many farm leaders of the State, deans and other members of the University staff, and representatives of the press services, metropolitan newspapers, news periodicals, and farm and trade publications.

Farming for Security

Pleasant Valley. By Louis Bromfield '18. Harper & Brothers, New York City. 1945. xii + 302 pages, $3.

After living for fifteen years in Europe, principally in France, a novelist returns to the rolling Ohio hills to make a permanent home for his descendants and to develop a permanent agriculture for security. The 1100 acres of Malabar Farm he made a testing ground for the most enlightened agricultural practices, such as contouring, strip cropping, restoration of worn-out soil, and a modified application of the non-plowing theories of Edward H. Faulkner.

Admitting that his large-scale operations, financed from the proceeds of his books and his writing for the movies, are beyond the reach of ordinary farmers, Bromfield nevertheless makes his book convincing propaganda for better farm practices. It is also an absorbing story of comfortable living on the land that will appeal to the many who have "the soil in their blood." Drawings of Malabar Farm by Kate Lord, who is the wife of Russel Lord '18, add greatly to the interest of the book.

Bromfield says of his college experiences: "At sixteen I had gone off to Cornell Agricultural College meaning to be a farmer. I might have gone on with that career but for two circumstances, both extremely powerful. One was a potent urge to become a writer; the other was my mother who was determined that I should not, as she phrased it, 'waste my life on a farm.' . . . During my first year at agricultural college my grandfather died at a great age and my mother insisted that I come home and operate his farm myself for a year in order to make a decision. . . . At the end of that year, I did not return to the college of agriculture; I went instead to the Columbia School of Journalism. But even that did not last for long. Before the first year was finished I went off to the war. I never gave either university much of a chance to teach me anything, but I never learned anything at all at either one."

Bulletin on China

Civil Liberties Lectures

Safeguarding Civil Liberty Today. By Becker, Lerner, Fly, Cushman, Biddle, and Day. Cornell University Press, Ithaca. 1945. x+158 pages, $2.00.

Edward L. Bernays Lectures on civil liberties, delivered at the University last September and October, are here published with President Edmund E. Day's Commencement address, "Freedom to Learn," which followed the lectures by a few weeks. Vice-president George H. Sabine '03 contributes a Preface to the book, explaining the purpose of the lectures, which were made possible by a gift from Bernays '12.

"Political Freedom: American Style," by the late Carl L. Becker, professor of History, emeritus, and University Historian, coming first in the series, provides an historical background to civil liberty in America and lays a foundation for the four remaining essays: "Freedom: Image and Reality," by Max Lerner, an editor of the newspaper PM; "Freedom of Speech and the Press," by James L. Fly, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission; "Civil Liberty and Public Opinion," by Robert E. Cushman, Goldwin Smith Professor of Government, who acted for the University in organizing the lectures; and "Civil Rights and the Federal Law," by Francis Biddle, former US Attorney General.

Third Roden Thriller

One Angel Less. By Henry W. Roden '18. William Morrow & Co. New York City. 1945. 216 pages, $2.

"Tex" Roden's third "who-done-it" within fifteen months has for its locale the Watkins House in Union City during an undertakers' convention, with coffins and the other merchandise of the profession displayed on the front lawn for lack of room indoors. The ubiquitous Sid Ames, private detective who was also the hero of the earlier You Only Hang Once and Too Busy to Die, gets a case this time away from his city office.

Only two murders and a suicide serve to carry the plot through the involvement of the town's leading undertaker (of many things besides bodies), the amiable banker, and the mysterious foreign doctor and his assistant who run a private hospital. Ames, of course, finds the luscious Fern Vaughn and the pleasure-seeking blond nurse, Wanda Parsons, of great help in his work. Although the victim of police thugs and of the crafty villain, the redoubtable Ames is spared to continue his adventures, presumably, in more books to follow.

All in Good Cause

SECRETARY of the Brown University Alumni Fund reports to Walter C. Heasley, Jr. '30, executive secretary of the Cornell Alumni Fund, an amusing experience with a member of the Cornell Class of '10 who had attended Brown briefly before he transferred to Cornell and received a degree.

This gentleman wrote the Brown class agent who had been soliciting him for the Brown Alumni Fund, explaining his position and suggesting that time and money might better be expended on Brown men. He concluded his letter: "So persuasive has been your solicitation, however, that I sent another check for the sum mentioned to my own college."

Spring Day Gayety

THE CAMPUS celebrated its biggest wartime Spring Day week end May 18-20, with houseparties, a musical show, the Navy Day Ball, a military review, and a full round of sports. Even the weather, traditionally damp, blessed the 1945 edition of this half-century-old holiday with intermittent sunshine, a good stiff breeze, and temperatures well above freezing.

The festive spirit took over Friday afternoon, when sixteen fraternities—the largest number in four war years—got their houseparties under way, some of the brothers welcoming imports at train and bus station while others transferred coed-with-luggage from her dormitory to one of the favored houses: Alpha Chi Sigma, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Psi, Beta Sigma Rho, Beta Theta Pi, Phi Kappa Sigma, Lambda Chi Alpha, Omega Tau Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Delta, Pi Lambda Phi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Sigma Chi, Sigma Nu, Tau Delta Phi, and Zeta Beta Tau. Beta Theta Pi, Phi Delta Theta, and Sigma Alpha Epsilon threw a joint party at the Phi Delta and Beta houses, covered, by invitation, by a tired reporter and photographer from Life magazine.

Spring Day celebrants crowded Bailey Hall Friday night for the premier of "Time Out," an original musical comedy in two acts, written and produced by the recently formed Octagon Club. The scene was a night club on New Year's Eve, 1999. Time, interrupted, proceeded to run backwards, with certain complications, mostly humorous. A cast of some thirty students carried this plot, backed up by a chorus of fifty voices, a thirteen-piece pony ballet, and an enthusiastic orchestra. It was a good show, warmly applauded by the audience which got an encore for every number.

Saturday, a University holiday, dawned in the best Spring Day tradition: with rain. But the sky cleared after breakfast and the program began on schedule. At 11 a combined military review, 2,500 strong, finding upper Alumni Field too soggy for marching, turned back down Campus Road and up West Avenue, passing a hastily assembled reviewing stand in front of the War Memorial flag pole.

Immediately following the review "The Hangover Hill Carnival," on Kite Hill behind the Crescent, had its booths ready for the crowd's amusement. Cokes flowed, ice cream was eaten, and hundreds of "dates" tossed pennies into floating saucers (prize: five cigarettes), sank or missed basketball shots (for a lollipop), aimed rings at well-spaced coins of varying denominations, placed bets on which cardboard box a scared mouse would dive into, and threw baseballs at a target, tripping a gangplank which dropped beer-fortified Beta Upsilon into a deep canvas tank of very cold water.

The carnival gave way at 2 to an unfortunate baseball double-header with Columbia; tennis matches with Colgate were called off because of damp courts; waves on Cayuga delayed the regatta, which was finally run off in heats on the Inlet.

Two events beckoned the customers Saturday night, before the dance. Sebela Wehe, Spring Day standby, gave her "178th Concert" at Military Hall, opposite the Police Station down-town; and the Octagon Club again filled Bailey Hall with a repeat performance of "Time Out." Sebela came off second best on attendance, but as usual, gave her all.

The Navy Day Ball in Barton Hall rounded out Spring Day for over 1,000 couples. Georgie Auld and orchestra supplied music from 10:30 to 2:30, fraternities and other Campus organizations again lined the dance floor with boxes for the weary, and refreshments were on hand.

Sunday was almost hot enough for swimming, and some tried it in Beebe Lake. Alpha Psi and Omega Tau Sigma scheduled picnics at Taughan-nock, but most of the brethren took the advice of The Cornell Bulletin, which listed Sunday as "Recovery Day, featuring sleeping, etc.; any old place."

[White's recent dispatches in The New Yorker from the United Nations Conference in San Francisco have attracted widespread attention—Ed.]

Fifteen Years Ago

June, 1930 — Republican Party leaders, including Vice-president Charles Curtis, Claudius H. Huston, chairman of the Republican National Committee, Congresswoman Ruth W. Pratt, and James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, were victimized last week by Berry Patch editors of The Cornell Daily Sun. The hoax, commented on editorially by The New York Times, Herald-Tribune, New York World, and other newspapers across the country, brought letters and telegrams from the party leaders, to be read at a sesquicentennial dinner honoring the birth of "Hugo N. Frye, little-known patriot of Central New York and pioneer Republican." Hugo N. Frye happens to be the hortative nom de plume often signed to Berry Patch articles.

Perhaps this is the first time that undergraduate frolics have held the attention of the nation's lawgivers on the floor of the Senate. Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi read the account aloud, to laughter from both sides of the aisle, and Mr. Curtis, rubbing his hand over a grinning face, finally joined in the outburst as he rapped for order.

President Hoover was not taken in.

Four One-Acters

NOVICE thespians culled from latest Dramatic Club tryouts, assisted by older members of the Club, gave a performance of four one-act plays May 12 in the Willard Straight Theater. The production was supervised by Professor Alex M. Drummond, Director of the University Theatre.

Snapping dialogue in the opening play, "Some Women Were Talking," delighted the near-capacity audience, who judged the new players to be worthy of membership in the Club and expected that the bill of fare would make up for any dramatic falterings. Seaman Martin Newman, USNR, did especially well as the honest but rather sissified husband, who finds that his innocent-looking wife has represented him to her female companions as a veritable superman. "The Bridegroom Waits" was a typical scene of doubts and misgivings before a wedding, where the bride, Martha Murrell '47, tries to decide whether to marry the groom. "The Odd Streak," a psychological study of an ugly duckling portrayed very well by Ruth Rothschild '46, struck a thoughtful, somewhat puzzling note. The last play, "Lonesome-Like," was the most polished of the four. Virginia Genove '48 as the paralytic old lady about to leave her Lancashire cottage for the workhouse, Ruth Marcus '46 as the pretty, sympathetic young girl, and Seaman Claude Zetty, USNR, as the bashful Romeo who adopts the old lady, gave fine performances.

Jobs Open

UNIVERSITY Placement Service lists sixty positions available in its current Job Bulletin; nearly fifty of these call for engineering education and experience. Chemists, salesmen, and physicists are also in demand. Three jobs are listed for women: two librarians and a dietitian. Of interest to some service men, one firm seeks "ex-pilots for aircraft sales; two years mechanical engineering desirable; good pay."

Job Bulletins are sent periodically to all alumni who are registered with the Placement Service, either at Willard Straight Hall, Ithaca, or the Cornell Club of New York.

Letters

Subject to the usual restrictions of space and good taste, we shall print letters from subscribers on any side of any subject of interest to Cornellians. The ALUMNI NEWS often may not agree with the sentiments expressed, and disclaims any responsibility beyond that of fostering interest in the University.

Touche

TO THE EDITOR:

Being a faithful and regular reader of your fine CORNELL ALUMNI NEWS even though a Pennsylvanian, I could not help but see the letter in your April 15 issue signed by Frederic E. Lyford '16.

The correspondent referred to a profile appearing in the picture of President Andrew Dickson White's statue. He surmised that the image in the hair of the good President represented the features of "some low-brow; possibly a Syracuse or Pennsylvania graduate."

I recognized the illusion immediately as being the profile of old George H. Brooke, who, way back in 1893, got into the hair of every Cornellian when he romped for seven touchdowns as Pennsylvania scored its greatest victory over the big Red team, to the tune of 50-0. Apparently Brooke still sticks in the hair of a few of the boys up at Ithaca, including your beloved former President White.

Just a minute to tell you how much I'm enjoying the ALUMNI NEWS, which my wife sends to me. We got in on the 7th's great crossing of the Rhine and are still moving forward toward Berlin. beginnings. The book is presented by the Alumni News and its publishers, the University Press.

Persons who live within twenty-five miles of Ithaca are not eligible to compete. Entries will be judged by the staff of the News, whose judgment shall be final. In case of a tie, winner will be selected by lot. Correct identification and winner's name will appear in the Alumni News July 1.

RESULT OF MAY 1 CONTEST

ELEVEN subscribers ventured to identify this boulder, pictured in our May 1 "Campus close-up." Four persons placed it incorrectly either behind the Library or behind Morrill Hall. The other seven correctly located it as being near the southwest corner of McGraw Hall and north of the Ezra Cornell statue, but only two of the seven knew that it is a memorial to the late Professor Ralph S. Tarr, Geology. Accordingly, the winner was chosen by lot from the two complete identifications, and a copy of Professor Becker's book has gone to Lloyd J. Moulton '42 who is engaged in contract termination with the Ohio River Division, Corps of Engineers, in Columbus, Ohio.

On the side back of the seat pictured, facing the Quadrangle, this granite boulder bears a bronze tablet, modelled by the late Professor Hiram S. Gutsell, Architect, which reads as follows: "Ralph Stockman Tarr, 1864-1912, Scientist—Writer—Teacher. This boulder, a relic of the Ice Age, symbolic of his research in glacial geology and of the enduring value of his work, is placed here as a memorial of their friend and adviser by his students."

more around some place. Private Anthony J. Roperti '44 and I hit the beach in the same Higgins landing barge; I recognized him as he was coming out. Others here now are Lieutenants George W. Ainslie '39, Morris Krapes '40, John E. Strong '40, John C. Barker '44, Norman H. Brandt '44, Roland F. Randall '44, Laurence A. Quinlivan, Jr. '44, Edmund M. Weatherby '44, Stanton R. Wilson '44, Douglas C. Archibald '45, Harry J. Flood '45, and Joseph J. Komaromi '45.

Most of the Cornellians now fighting for the liberation of the Philippines plan to return to school immediately after the war, for one to three years. We are all looking forward to a quick victory and return to Ithaca to finish our work.

I am executive officer in a Field Artillery battery, but that's about all I can say about it.

Hospital Looks Ahead

SPECIAL committee to study by what means New York Hospital can integrate its services under socialized medicine, if that should come, has been at work for three months, according to its chairman, Dr. David P. Barr '11, professor of Medicine in the Medical College and chief of the Hospital's department of medicine. The committee was formed at the suggestion of President Edmund E. Day, then chairman of the joint administrative board of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical College Association, and Langdon P. Marvin, present chairman and president of New York Hospital. It was decided that the Hospital should not wait until medical innovations are forced upon it, but should take an active part in molding its own future to become a health center under a mass medical care plan, Dr. Barr said.

Cornell Engineer

LEADING article in The Cornell Engineer for April is on "Post-war Wage Trends" by Frank D. Newberry '01, vice-president of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. Professor L. Donald Doty, Hydraulic Engineering, contributes "A Quarter Century of Engineering Retrospect." Profile of an outstanding Engineering alumnus in this issue is of William Littlewood '20, vice-president of American Airlines in charge of engineering, appointed by President Roosevelt to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, and member of the executive council of the Cornell Society of Engineers.

New Student Council

STUDENT COUNCIL will be reorganized as a result of Campus balloting in which a new constitution and by-laws were adopted, to take effect next December 1. The Cornell Bulletin published a series of three articles explaining the proposed changes, and Campus posters urged: "For a Better Constitution Vote Yes—Cornell Progressive Party." The vote was 516 for the new constitution; 23 against.

The latest framework for student government was drawn by the present Council under leadership of its president, Apprentice Seaman Paul W. Christensen, Jr. '46, USNR.

For Direct Representation

The constitution provides for direct election of all Student Council members by undergraduates and eliminates members elected by various student activities. Ten members are to be elected by and from the various undergraduate Classes: two men representing those in the seventh and eighth terms of University work (Seniors); two for the fifth and sixth terms (Juniors); and one each from the third and fourth and first and second terms (Sophomores and Freshmen, respectively). Each of the women's Classes will elect one member of the Council. Junior men will hold office for two years, the Junior who receives the highest vote to serve as Class president until the first alumni meeting of the Class. Men members from the Sophomore and Freshman Classes and all women Class members are presidents of their respective Classes during their one-year terms.

Besides Class representatives, additional members of the Council will be elected by women students and by men subdivided as to civilians, Army, and Navy students; on a formula of one Council member for every 500 students or fraction thereof in each of the several groups. With present distribution of Campus population, it is estimated that this provision may add four women members and perhaps four Navy representatives and one each for Army and civilian men, for a council of about twenty members.

Interests of Campus organizations will be represented through a student activities committee composed of delegates from all organizations whose applications are approved. These representatives are not members of the Council, but the second vice-president of the Council is chairman of the student activities committee. Working committees of the Council are a budget committee, election board, band committee, music committee, entertainment committee, spirit and traditions committee, Freshman advisory committee, and a Cornell-for-Victory committee.

In some respects, the new constitution reverts to the original conception of a Student Council formed in 1915 to coordinate the former undergraduate Class organizations. Announced purpose then was "that undergraduate affairs may be controlled in a more efficient manner with a wholesome cooperative spirit" and the Student Council idea was advocated "to cure the evils of Class politics." Committee which drew up the original plan consisted of William L. Kleitz '15, now president of the Cornell Alumni Association, Robert B. Lea '15, Kenneth C. McCutcheon '15, Clement L. Spiden '15, and Maurice W. Howe '16.

In the thirty years since, fraternity and other "coalitions" have been active at various times in Student Council elections, and recently Class representation on the Council has become subordinated to that of other Campus organizations, with most of the members the officers or delegates of WSGA, the Cornell-for-Victory committee, a Campus-wide public affairs committee, The Bulletin, Willard Straight Hall board of managers, CURW, Cosmopolitan Club, Independent Association, Interfraternity Council, and the men's Senior societies.

Arguments advanced for the new organization were that Council members elected directly by students would feel responsibility to the electors rather than to some other organization, and would have more time to devote to student government if they are not officers or delegates of Campus activities.

A Summer Council will be elected to hold office until after election of the new Student Council next fall.

Sigma Xi Elects

CORNELL'S founding chapter of Sigma Xi, national honor society in science, initiated thirty-nine members May 23, in Martha Van Rensselaer Hall. The ceremony was followed by a dinner in the auditorium, with Professor Arthur A. Allen '07, Ornithology, giving an illustrated lecture on "The Bird's World."

Two alumni members were elected, Jay R. Schenck, PhD '41, and Mortimer P. Starr, PhD '43; two from the Faculty, Professor Arless A. Spielman, Animal Husbandry, and Dr. George A. Wolf '40, Medicine. Three of the twenty-seven graduate students elected are former undergraduates: George F. Warren, Jr. '35, Winthrop D. Bellamy '38, and James C. White

'39. Five graduate students were elected associate members, including Harold H. Axtell '42 and Joseph C. Logue '44. Three undergraduate members were elected, Wallace H. Toole '44, Leonard Rush '45, and Alton Meister '46.

More Generals

THREE more Cornell generals bring to fifteen the total of alumni general officers known to be on active duty in the US Army.

Brigadier General Robert I. Stack '20 made newspaper headlines last month when he personally accepted the surrender of Hermann Goering, former No. 2 Nazi, as second in command of the US Seventh Army's 36th Division. General Stack entered Arts and Sciences in 1916, and in May, 1917, was commissioned a second lieutenant and went overseas with the 2d Pioneer Infantry. He was in Germany with the Army of Occupation and returned to the University for a year, in 1922. He rejoined the Army and served in the Philippines and China before Pearl Harbor. As colonel and regimental commander in the First Armored Division, he fought through the North African campaign, was wounded in action May 6, 1943, in Tunisia, received the Purple Heart, Silver Star, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, and Legion of Merit, and was promoted to brigadier general. After hospitalization in the States, he returned to action at Anzio, fought into France and Germany with the Seventh Army.

Brigadier General Francis G. Brink '16 is on duty at Headquarters, Southeast Asia Command, India. Having received the AB, he enlisted in May, 1917, was commissioned a lieutenant of Infantry, and has remained in the Army. Stationed in the Philippines just before the war, he was transferred to Singapore as US military observer and liaison officer with the British forces. When that fortress fell to the Japanese, he escaped by plane to Java and went from there to Burma and India, where he helped train "Merrill's Marauders," to Africa, and back to the States. He took part in the Battle of Midway and the Aleutians campaign, winning the Distinguished Service Cross. Mrs. Brink (Florence Roos), Grad '15-16, and their son, Robert S. Brink '43, who is also in the Army, live in Tuskegee, Ala.

Charles E. Saltzman '24, recently promoted to brigadier general, has been with the Signal Corps in Italy since the Allied invasion of that country. He is vice-president and secretary of the New York Stock Exchange, on leave the last five years.

Alumni Meetings Set

CLASS Reunions are again postponed this June, because of wartime shortage of accommodations in Ithaca and difficulties of travel. Many Classes are making plans, however, to participate in a glorious Victory Reunion at the University when the war is over, with hopes that it may be next year.

Commencement week end, June 22-24, will include the stated meetings of alumni organizations, and the Senior Class has planned a modified Senior Week program. The Senior Week committee under chairmanship of Margaret Hammersley of Hamburg and Bryce I. MacDonald of Westfield, N. J., has scoured Ithaca to locate rooms for visiting parents and friends of Seniors.

Officials Will Gather

Annual meetings of the Cornell Alumni Association and Alumni Fund Council, to which all Cornellians are invited, will be combined in Willard Straight Hall Saturday morning, June 23, at 10:30. Officers of the Fund Council will be elected, vote will be taken on proposed amendments to the Alumni Association by-laws, result of balloting for Alumni Trustees will be announced, and President Edmund E. Day will make his annual report to alumni of the past year at the University.

Executive committee of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs will meet at dinner in Willard Straight Hall, Friday evening, June 22, and that evening Senior singing is scheduled at the Goldwin Smith portico. Alumni Fund Council executive committee will meet at 9:00 a.m. at Alumni House Saturday morning, and after the annual meetings, directors of the Alumni Association will gather at luncheon in Willard Straight Hall. Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs annual meeting will be at four Saturday in Willard Straight Hall, and the Home Economics Alumnae Association annual meeting is scheduled for 5:30 in Martha Van Rensselaer Hall. Senior Class Day exercises at Goldwin Smith Hall that evening will be followed by the Senior Ball in Willard Straight Memorial Room. Quill and Dagger alumni will hold their annual breakfast meeting in Willard Straight Hall, Sunday.

Approximately 475 Seniors will receive degrees at the Commencement in Bailey Hall, Sunday afternoon, June 24. Some 355 of these are civilian students and approximately 120 are in the Navy V-12 program. In addition, it is estimated that approximately 75 graduate students will receive degrees. President Day will be the Commencement speaker. Baccalaureate services in Bailey Hall Sunday at 11 will be conducted by the Rev. Robert R. Wicks, dean of the university chapel at Princeton.

To Amend By-Laws

Principal amendment of the by-laws of the Cornell Alumni Association to be voted upon at the annual meeting will include as members of the Association all students who have attended regular University classes in the Army and Navy College Training Programs. Unless they receive degrees, Army and Navy students who had not previously matriculated in the University as civilians are not eligible for membership under the present by-laws. Other proposed amendments recognize the change in title of the Alumni Secretary of the University to General Alumni Secretary. Recent action of the Trustees made this change and provided that this official shall be "placed in charge of all organized alumni activities, as now recognized by the Alumni Association."

Text of the proposed amendments to the by-laws follows:

ARTICLE II—MEMBERSHIP; SECTION 3. Members:

Add: "This membership includes also all Army or Navy personnel who took courses at Cornell University which might be offered for credit toward a degree."

ARTICLE IV—OFFICERS; SECTION 13. Election of Officers:

Amend to read "General Alumni Secretary" in place of "Alumni Secretary."

SECTION 16a: Amend to read "General Alumni Secretary" in place of "Alumni Secretary."

ARTICLE V—COMMITTEES; SECTION 24. Committee on Election for Alumni Trustees: Change title to read Committee on Elections and add: "This committee shall also conduct the biennial elections and canvass the vote for district directors of this association."

St. Louis Officers

OFFICERS of the Cornell Club of St. Louis, Mo., elected May 15 at a dinner meeting at Belvedere Joe's, are R. Harris Cobb '16, president; Forrest W. Boecker '34, secretary; and James M. Nelson '19, treasurer.

Edward H. Carman, Jr. '16, chairman of the Alumni Association committee on secondary schools, told the forty alumni present how Cornell Club activities have built interest in Cornell in Baltimore. Head Football Coach Edward C. McKeever spent the day in town and also spoke at the Club dinner.

Slants on Sports

By Bill Haters '27

FOR more than three hours May 19, racing shells plied Cayuga Inlet, three in one race, two in all the others; and when night came crews of the US Naval Academy had triumphed in freshman, junior varsity, and varsity contests.

Elsewhere on Spring Day, 1945, no Cornell victories were recorded, but the track team, winning two individual championships, tied for fourth in the Intercollegiate at West Point. The baseball team lost a Hoy Field doubleheader to Columbia in Eastern Intercollegiate League competition, and the golf team placed seventh and last in the Intercollegiate at Princeton.

Crews Race on Inlet

SPRING DAY in Ithaca dawned with rain, but the skies cleared. The wind, however, heralding the onset of a fair week end after days of rain, did not abate, and the nation's largest college rowing regatta of the season had to be shifted from the Lake's east shore course to the more sheltered Inlet. With four crews entered in the junior varsity and varsity races, these events had to be run in two heats and a final each. The distance had to be cut from two miles to one.

Three crews were crowded into the freshman race as scheduled. They too rowed one mile, and the US Naval Academy demonstrated a marked superiority, finishing better than two lengths ahead of Cornell, with MIT third.

The varsities raced next, with Cornell pitted against MIT in the first heat. Two weeks earlier MIT had defeated Cornell on the Charles River at Cambridge. Here Cornell turned the tables by the narrowest of margins: two-tenths of a second. Actually, Cornell caught and passed MIT with its last ten strokes.

In the second heat, the Academy eight reversed a previous decision. Columbia had defeated the Midshipmen on the Severn River at Annapolis the week before. The Academy won on the Inlet by four-tenths of a second. Close finishes were a dime a dozen in this regatta.

While the varsity finalists rested, the junior varsity heats were run; and the pattern was repeated. Cornell defeated MIT by three-quarters of a length, and the Naval Academy won from Columbia by a little more than a half-length.

Referee Ned Ten Eyck, Syracuse crew coach, sent the varsity shells away to a perfect start. Cornell jumped into the early lead, but the Midshipmen, rowing a slightly lower beat, pulled up and passed Cornell after the two boats were virtually even at the half-mile. Cornell spurted to come up again with a quarter-mile to go, but the Academy oarsmen put on a driving finish to win at the boat house by a deck: one second by the watch.

It was almost dark when the junior varsity final started. Cornell built up a lead, but Navy's finishing drive was too powerful. The Academy eight won by close to a half-length.

In the early races, the starts near the white lighthouse were ragged because of the extremely rough water coming in off the Lake. This accounts for some unusual variations in time in the following summary:

Freshman: Naval Academy, 5:12.2; Cornell, 5:21; MIT, 5:26.

Chief judge was Professor Charles L. Durham '99, Latin, Emeritus; timers were Dr. W. Forrest Lee '06 and Norman G. Stagg '26, former oarsmen.

The Naval Academy varsity, by luck of the draw, rowed in Cornell's newest shell, christened May 18 the "Charles E. Courtney," for the man who coached crew from 1885 until his death in 1920. Mrs. Robert J. Kane, wife of the Director of Physical Education and Athletics, christened the shell, which was manufactured by George Pocock, Seattle, Wash., boat-builder, and delivered a month ago.

Cornell borrowed two shells from Syracuse to round out a fleet of eight for the regatta.

Two Freshman boats defeated two crews from the Buffalo Rowing Club on the Inlet, May 12.

Baseball Losses

BASEBALL team lost four games, three of them on Hoy Field. Cornell errors figured largely in Colgate's 10-4 victory at Hamilton, May 9. Actually Cornell outhit Colgate, 9-6.

On May 12, Rochester won, 3-1, to sweep its season's series with Cornell. Gniewek hurled four-hit ball, while Alfred W. Rothermel, USNR, gave up seven hits. Rochester broke a 1-1 tie with two runs in the fifth inning. They were scored on three singles and an outfield fly.

Opener of the League doubleheader with Columbia produced the closest game of the season. Columbia took a 1-0 decision as Garbett pitched another four-hitter. This time Rothermel pitched a five-hitter, but had to yield. In the sixth inning, Columbia scored the winning run when D'Errico singled to right, moved to second on an infield out, and scored when Captain Joseph P. Mascola, USNR, threw wide of first on another grounder.

The second game was a sharp contrast. There were twenty-one hits, eight of them for extra bases. James F. Troutner '48 smashed a home run almost to the fence in right-center field; one of the longest hits ever made inside Hoy Field. Cornell's three pitchers—Paul A. Smith, USNR, Robert Frawley, USNR, and Walter D. Way '48—could not hold Columbia's hitters in check. The visitors staged a five-run rally in the fifth inning to put the game away.

Track Intercollegiates

TRACK team returned from West Point with John F. Kandl '45 winner of the two-mile run and Gilbert J. Bouley '47 the champion in the discus throw. Twelve colleges figured in the scoring in the Intercollegiates, Cornell and Dartmouth tying for fourth place with 13 points apiece. The Naval Academy retained its championship with a record-breaking 85¾ points.

The meet was contested on a heavy track in rainy weather. Kandl won his race impressively, setting the pace for seven laps and then turning on the heat in the final lap to finish sixty yards ahead of Martin of NYU. Kandl was timed in 9:45.5.

Bouley won the discus with a toss of 139 feet 1 inch. This event was contested in the field house.

Paul Robeson, Jr. '48 leaped 6 feet 1 inch to take fourth place in the high jump, and the mile relay team placed fifth. On the relay were Bernard Bernstein, Daniel M. Kelley, Daniel A. Belknap, and Jay R. Bergen, all Naval Reservists.

Lacrosse Beaten 23-2

US Military Academy's lacrosse team spotted Cornell a brief lead early in the first period of their game on Alumni Field May 12, made it 10-2 at the half, and then blanked the home team in the last two quarters.

Cornell's goals were scored by Edward J. Best, USNR, outside home, and Raleigh Bent '49, inside home.

Army Wins Tennis

THE Military Academy blanked the tennis team, 9-0, on the Cascadilla Courts May 12, with all matches decided in straight sets. In singles, only John P. Gnaedinger '47 and Edward C. Taylor, Jr. '48 were able to extend their opponents to extra games.

Last in Golf

IN the golf intercollegiates at Princeton, N. J., May 19, the Cornell team was disqualified when one player failed to turn in his scorecard. Cornell thus placed seventh and last.

The Military Academy retained its championship with 996 strokes. Other scores: Naval Academy, 1002; Dartmouth, 1074; Princeton, 1076; MIT, 1152; Lafayette, 1168.

Arnold H. Page '45 topped the Cornell scorers with 172 for eighteen holes.

Get Basketball Trophy

PLAYERS and managers of last winter's Varsity basketball team were guests of the Department of Physical Education and Athletics at a dinner in Willard Straight Hall, April 25, to receive the Allie Seelbach Memorial Trophy and medals as the outstanding college basketball team of up-State New York.

The silver trophy was presented for annual award by Ned Irish, president of Madison Square Garden, in memory of Seelbach who was coach at Canisius College for eleven years until his death last summer. He was a brother of Charles G. Seelbach '19, Class secretary.

Chairman of the committee to make this first award was Dr. James H. Crowdle, director of athletics at Canisius, and he presented the cup and medals to the team and to Coach Emerald B. Wilson and Trainer Frank Kavanagh. With Director Robert J. Kane '34 as toastmaster, Coach Wilson accepted the cup and paid tribute to his players, pointing out that in winning twelve of their seventeen games last season, they had made the best record of any Cornell basketball team since the 1923-24 season, and that no Cornell team in twenty years until this one had twice defeated both Dartmouth and Syracuse in the home-and-home series. Trainer Kavanagh complimented the boys on their improvement during the season and for keeping themselves in good condition under the gruelling hardships of the present game. Last year's captain, Irwin Alterson, USNR, and the captain-elect, Gordon W. Harrison '46, spoke briefly.

For the Record

PAUL C. MURRAY, USMCR, was placed second among the top five performers in the 200-yard breaststroke by the College Swimming Coaches' Association of America. Murray, who swam on the undefeated 1943-44 and 1944-45 Cornell teams, holds the Cornell and Old Armory pool record of 2:28.5 and won first place in the breaststroke at the NC-AA championships at Michigan last spring.

Coach Edward C. McKeever told alumni in Cornell Club talks last month that Cornell will play the Military Academy in football in 1946, the Naval Academy in 1947, and both academies in 1948. "After last fall, I can afford to miss 'em for a year," he said. McKeever's Notre Dame team last season lost to both service schools.

Alumni Rank Highly in Sciences

AMERICAN Men of Science, 1944 edition, contains biographies of some 34,000 American scientists in the fields of anatomy, anthropology, astronomy, botany, chemistry, geology, mathematics, pathology, physics, physiology, psychology, and zoology. Leaders in each field are starred by vote of distinguished scientists.

Interested in comparing American universities as to the number of younger scientists on their faculties and among their alumni who gain distinction, Dr. Stephen S. Visser, professor of geography at the University of Indiana, compiled statistics on those who gained stars in the volumes from 1933-44. University of Chicago Magazine for January published his findings.

Dr. Visser, who taught at Cornell in the Summer Sessions of 1926, 1927, and 1930, first tabulated members of the various college faculties who received stars during the last ten years. Harvard, with fifty scientists so honored, tops the list. Cornell, with eighteen, takes eleventh place.

But total numbers do not give a true idea of the proportionate strength of the various faculties. Dr. Visser was also interested in what he calls "median faculty strength." He worked out the number of young starred scientists per 100 members of each faculty. In this table, California Institute of Technology leads, with Princeton second and Massachusetts Institute of Technology third; Cornell is fifteenth.

In ranking the different institutions, Dr. Visser next examined their alumni of the same period, tabulating the number of graduates who received stars during this decade, and the proportionate strength based on average student enrollment. In number of starred graduates, Harvard leads, followed by Chicago, California, and Cornell. In proportionate alumni strength, Chicago leads, with Cornell in second place.

The following tables show that Cornell, while not a leader among American universities in either size or median strength of science faculties, stands with the leaders in alumni who are distinguished in science.

Cornell In Pictures

CORNELL In Pictures, first published by The Cayuga Press eight years ago, appears now with several new pictures and with captions rewritten. Its thirty photographs of Campus buildings and environs, each with description occupying a full page, make the brochure an attractive souvenir of the University. It is bound in heavy red covers with plastic binding.

Cornell In Pictures may be purchased at $1 a copy, postpaid, from the Cornell Co-Op, Ithaca.

New Jersey Women

TWENTY-TWO members of the Cornell Women's Club of Northern New Jersey met for dinner May 16 at the Fulton Towers in East Orange, adjourning later to the home of Alice E. M. Mouronval '23 for their annual meeting and election of officers.

Mrs. Louis A. Winkelman (Helen Kinney) '22 of Maplewood was re-elected president, Margaret M. Tammen '40 of Short Hills is vice-president, Mrs. William T. Maguire (Lorraine Gold) '27 of East Orange is secretary, and Mrs. George J. Kilgen (Gertrude Hohrath) '31 is treasurer. After the business meeting the Club members enjoyed a Cornell quiz.

Borden Award Winners

DIRECTORY of Borden Awards for 1944, recently published by the Borden Co., contains pictures and biographies of nine scientists honored with a gold medal and $1,000 "for outstanding research achievements in the food industry and related fields." Three are Cornellians: Professor Arthur C. Dahlberg, Grad '27-28, Dairy Industry, winner of the American Dairy Science Association's award; and Professors Samuel Z. Levine '20 and Harry H. Gordon '26, Pediatrics, presented jointly the Borden Award of the American Academy of Pediatrics "for their metabolic studies on the nutritional requirements of premature and full-term infants."

Dr. Levine received the BA at CCNY in 1916, the MD at Cornell in 1920; he joined the Medical College Faculty in 1924; is pediatrician-in-chief at New York Hospital. Dr. Gordon, on leave from the Medical College and New York Hospital as a major, Army Medical Corps, received the AB in 1926 and the MD in 1929 at Cornell; he joined the Medical College Faculty in 1932; was senior specialist in maternal and child health,

The Directory lists thirty-nine Borden Award recipients since 1937. Eight are Cornellians, including besides those of last year, Byron H. Webb, PhD '31, in 1943; Vigfus S. Asmundson, MSA '20, in 1942; Dr. Paul F. Sharp, until 1942 professor of Dairy Chemistry, in 1941; and Professor Leo C. Norris '20, Nutrition, and William E. Krauss '21, in 1938.

Club Has Sze '01

CHIEF adviser to the Chinese delegation at the United Nations Conference in San Francisco, Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze '01 addressed thirty-two members of the Cornell Club of Northern California at luncheon May 2 at the Commercial Club.

Seibert L. Sefton '29, president of the Club, introduced Dr. Sze, who spoke on the Conference, with special reference to China.

Industrial Directors

COMMERCE and Industry Association of New York at its forty-eighth annual meeting in New York City, May 15, elected two Cornellians of its three new directors for three-year terms. They are Henry Bruere '02, president of the Bowery Savings Bank, and William L. Kleitz '15, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust Co. and president of the Cornell Alumni Association.

Maryland Elects

CORNELL Club of Maryland elected Roy H. Ritter '30 president for 1945-46, succeeding John deB. Shepard '29, May 4 at the Engineers Club in Baltimore. Seth W. Heartfield '19 is vice-president, Eduard Fritz, Jr. '20 is treasurer, and Walter E. Gregg, Jr. '39 is secretary.

After dinner, the forty-nine Club members and guests were addressed by the University's new football coach, Edward C. McKeever.

Engineers Officers

New executive vice-president, succeeding Leinroth, is Robert B. Lea '15. Paul O. Reyneau '13 is re-elected secretary-treasurer, and Karl J. Nelson '38 is recording secretary.

Elections were at a supper meeting May 7, at the Cornell Club of New York. Dean S. C. Hollister, Engineering, and Head Football Coach Edward C. McKeever were speakers.

Now in My Time!

By Conny Berry

IN any university, most changes occur over the violent objection, and the dead body, of some loyal alumnus. But they occur just the same! About all the loyal alumnus can do about it is pick himself up after the impact, run ahead a little, and again vainly cast the same objections, the same dead body, in the path of progress.

Your reporter has about decided to withdraw from the struggle and permit all subsequent advances to be made over somebody else's dead body!

After all, there are so many things at Ithaca that haven't changed, that can't change. It might be better to dwell on these, remembering what the doctor said about your blood pressure and forgetting what you heard that the Trustees propose to do about the curriculum and the destruction of ancient landmarks.

You object, you say, to placing a new building on that stretch of greensward where you hit the timely three-bagger in the game with the Delta Whoops in 1898? You don't like subordinating the study of Philosophy, English Literature, History, and Art to Navigation, Deep Freezing, Labor Relations, and Artificial Insemination. That attitude, my dear sir, dates you like a pound of coffee; classifies you as precisely as any bug neatly labelled and displayed upon a pin. You are a loyal, sentimental alumnus needlessly concerned with things that either aren't so, or are as inevitable and proper as that the sun shall rise again tomorrow over the dark shoulders of Turkey Hill.

For your own peace of mind, withdraw with me to the serene contemplation of all the reassuring things that haven't changed and won't. The pink horse-chestnuts are again in bloom at the south end of Morrill Hall. There remains the stone bench flaunting into the sunset the inscription that you once combatted violently, but which you are now coming to accept with mild mental reservations: "Above All Nations Is Humanity." That boy and girl with their arms around each other, leaning over the railing of the Swinging Bridge and gazing across the dark valley into the afterglow above Kennedy's Corners! That boy might be you again? But at the moment it's a lot more likely that the damsel is your granddaughter!

Most changes—proposed, studied, advocated, and fought—don't happen. If you question that, go back through the files of the ALUMNI NEWS and count the number of different "Plans For The Future Development of The University" that have been adopted, published, and forgotten.

But it's a good thing to be making plans and discussing changes, even though nothing tangible may come of them. It shows that the fires are burning under the pot, and from the number of bubbles that are coming up in Ithaca just now, we'd say there was a lot of fire under the academic cauldron. One feels premonitions of such an upsurging as came to Florence in the fifteenth century and infected the humblest citizen with the hot urge to seize tools and materials, to make his period, his city, and himself noteworthy because of towers, domes, frescoes, epics, paintings, bridges, sculpture, and golden chalices.

Even the students seem to have caught the desire to cultivate new fields and bring forth novel accomplishments. A group of them have organized to produce light operas, an art form presumably not heretofore dealt with by students of Cornell. Nor will old-timers do other than wish the boys and girls well in their brave adventure, even though there may occasionally ring through old heads snatches of student-written opera tunes and resounding choruses that once echoed through the old Lyceum on Cayuga Street.

Don't concern yourself with the early forms in which the reawakening shows itself. The all-important thing is that there are signs and portents of a reawakening. Airports, deep freezers, and artificial insemination may be the first things to come to the top, and be grateful for them, but that doesn't mean that there are not other things to emerge, also, if everybody gets sufficiently excited to feed the little flame and fan it with his hat.

The Commission advocates establishment of an International Office of Education as a contribution to world security. On The Campus and Down the Hill

Festival of Contemporary American Arts takes over the Campus June 1-3, with exhibitions in Willard Straight, Martha Van Rensselaer, Goldwin Smith, and White Halls. The Festival includes a Dramatic Club presentation of Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth," concerts by the University Orchestra and the Walden String Quartet, a dance recital and lecture, exhibits of painting, sculpture, and architecture by representative American artists, undergraduates, and Ithacans, and a lecture by Sheldon Cheney, eminent art critic. "A new venture at Cornell, the Festival brings together the various arts as they are being practiced today, and helps to clarify the role of the artist as an interpreter of American life."

All of Beethoven's thirty-two piano sonatas, including the well-known "Moonlight," were played for the University community last month by Egon Petri, Pianist-in-residence, in six concerts. Every seat in the Willard Straight Memorial Room was filled for the entire series, with latecomers turned away. Playing entirely without notes, Dr. Petri amply demonstrated his fame for repertoire as well as for performance.

Official party of seven officers from the Division of Training, Bureau of Naval Personnel, visited the University May 21 and 22 to discuss with members of the Faculty and administrators plans for the Naval ROTC unit which will be established here next November 1. Senior officer of the party was Captain Arthur S. Adams, USN, Provost-elect of the University; a member was Lieutenant Raymond F. Howes '24, USNR, former University Director of Public Information.

Johnstone-Wallace, Agronomy, they inspected crop production, beef pastures, dairy herds, the University's artificial insemination plant, and visited nearby dairy farms. From Cornell, the group will tour the midwest and Canada.

WHCU, the University radio station, has won its second national award this year with "Let's Make a Dress," a program prepared by Professor Helen Powell Smith, Home Economics Extension. It won first place at CCNY's annual conference on radio and business "for the most effective radio program developed to increase the station's share of the local audience." The WHCU program taught some 1,300 women to make their own dresses, and many had had no previous experience with gores and gussets. Last June, WHCU won The Billboard award "for outstanding achievement in radio promotion."

Alumni Trustee Mary H. Donlon '20, chairman of the New York State Workmen's Compensation Board, speaking at a luncheon of the Association of Bank Women May 12 in New York City, urged women to assume a greater share of the responsibility of citizenship. She pointed out that women in Germany, Italy, and Japan were not a motivating force in government and politics. If another world conflict arises, "it will be because women have missed their opportunity to win and keep the peace," she declared.

Mrs. Harper Sibley, wife of the former University Trustee, was selected April 29 "The American Mother of 1945" by the Golden Rule Foundation. She received the Motherhood Medal after Mother's Day ceremonies in New York City. She has six children and thirteen grandchildren. In the current issue of Farm Economics, published by the College of Agriculture, Professor Frank A. Pearson '12, Dean William I. Myers '14, and James H. Lorie '43 predict that "this nation cannot keep some of the extravagant promises that have been made to help relieve the food shortage in Europe." They say, however, that shipment of wheat to bridge the gap until the next harvest will cause millions to forget the broken promises and be grateful. The economists point out that the war has caused a shortage of food in Europe, both in quality and quantity. But in the great food-producing regions, "old men, women, and children will get crops planted this spring in spite of the shortage of work animals, machinery, and young men. Therefore, Europe's food supply should be greatly eased this fall, and America need no longer be concerned over Europe's food problem." These writers declare that there will be no shortage of wholesome plant food in America this spring, although there will be a shortage of meat. Civilians will eat the same amount of food by substituting plant for animal products. "This shift to plant foods will cause sputterings, but it will not cause malnutrition, increase in sickness, or a rise in the death rate."

OUR little rhapsody of last month about the Spring weather struck a sour note. Almost at once, things began to happen, culminating in a snow storm May 10, and we can assure you that Ithaca weather is just as bad as it used to be.

V - E Day was celebrated mildly on the Campus; everyone seemed to realize that the job is only half done. But already we are beginning to see encouraging signs and before many months, we will be able to supply our customers with a lot of those things that have been missing from our shelves for a long time.

There are some slick new Cornell Bracelets and Compacts in stock now, and a lot of Cornell Mascots, including Skeeter, Jiggs, Sandy, and the Pup from the dog family as well as the Mule, the Deer, and the Kangaroo. A new edition of Cornell in Pictures is going well. There's a heavy glass Ash Tray with Cornell Seal at 75¢ and a pottery ash tray at $1.25.

Some things at the Co-op might surprise you. We're selling Perfume now; we had to fill the pen case with something. We filled the alarm clock shelves with Dolls and we sell them too. Wish we could find something with which to fill the cigarette case!

And you might be interested to know that we are working on a plan for men's Class Rings which will speed up delivery to two weeks or less. Write for our illustrated folder on class rings.

'43—First Lieutenant Richard ★ E. Marchisio, USMCR, neutralized several Jap 320-mm. "floating ashcan" mortars on Okinawa by directing round-the-clock artillery fire on the Jap observation post controlling the mortars. He located the mortars behind the Japs' main defense line on the ridge shielding Naha, Okinawa's largest city. Marine artillery, supporting the Yanks, could not knock out the mortar protected behind the ridge. Lieutenant Marchisio, seeing through his field glasses a Jap on a high point of the ridge, assumed that he was target spotting for the "floating ashcans" and began a regular shelling of the observation post. Deprived of observation, the Japs kept most of the mortar shells on their own side of the ridge. Lieutenant Marchisio's home is at 470 West Twenty-fourth Street, New York City.

We were in on it, with the second battalion on our right. I saw them get caught in the field by the Jerry mortars while we looked on from a nearby hill. After the second moved out of fire, the Jerries shifted to us and I nearly caught a shell in my hip pocket. Twenty men piled through one narrow doorway in one second flat. I started last and ended well in the middle. We still laugh over that one."

The most important part of this picture is the FLAME

THE ENGINES of high-flying planes "breathe" in rarefied atmosphere by means of the turbosupercharger which supplies them with air.

The turbosupercharger—a small, high-speed turbine-type air compressor (see sketch below)—is driven by the energy in the exhaust flames from the plane's engines.

Driving turbines by gas flames has been a dream of engineers for many years. However, they had to wait for the metal parts that would remain hard and strong enough to withstand the wear of flaming heat at terrific speed.

Alloys that are strong even when red hot and, at the same time, adequately resistant to corrosion and wear were developed more than 20 years ago by HAYNES STELLITE COMPANY, a Unit of UCC. All these years the ways to shape any but simple parts of these "red-hard" alloys have been too slow and costly for mass production. Now Haynes Stellite has perfected a new technique for making cast precision parts by the millions and this has made turbosuperchargers possible and practical.

Gas turbines, jet-propelled planes and similar important scientific developments are making swift strides now because this Unit of UCC gives engineers mass production of precision parts that remain strong, hard and wear-resisting even when red hot.

Engineers, designers, and teachers are invited to send for booklet P-6 "Tables of Physical, Mechanical and Chemical Properties—Products of Haynes Stellite Company." There is no obligation.
