Nuclear Laboratory Organized Bacher To Direct Atom Workers

RESearch on the phenomena of high-energy particles will shortly be expanded on the Campus in the recently organized Laboratory of Nuclear Studies, for which a new building and equipment are now being planned, probably located on The Circle behind the Chemistry building. The Laboratory is directed by Professor Robert F. Bacher, Physics, who as head of the bomb physics division of "the best-equipped research laboratory in the world" at Los Alamos, New Mex., directed the design and assembly of atomic bombs. Staff will consist of members of the Physics Department and other divisions of the University, including Chemistry, Engineering, and workers in the biological sciences.

For Basic Research

The Laboratory will be devoted to basic research in nuclear phenomena rather than specific applications such as the atomic bomb. In some 30,000 square feet of floor space devoted to laboratories and offices, studies will cover the whole field of nuclear forces, cosmic rays whose neutrons may initiate the chain reaction of atomic fission, and high-energy particles. Work will be coordinated with that of the Physics Department by a committee of Professors Hans A. Bethe, chairman; Lloyd P. Smith, PhD '30, who becomes chairman of Physics July 1 when Professor R. Clifton Gibbs '06 retires; and Bacher.

The "baby cyclotron" built by the Physics Department will remain in Rockefeller Hall where for a year and a half from before Pearl Harbor it was used to obtain data on neutron reactions under contract with the National Defense Research Committee. Modulation equipment built in the Physics Department to determine neutron velocities by measuring their time of flight in millionths of a second, is now back in operation in Rockefeller Hall, having been loaned to the Government for use at Los Alamos. The new Laboratory building may eventually contain an improved cyclotron capable of more complete atom-smashing and exploration of nuclear force, but the first important piece of equipment will be a high-energy electron accelerator, furnishing electrons at more than 150 million volts, to be housed in a separate wing of the new building. Later, it is hoped that a fast-neutron reactor, designed to release nuclear energy in quantity for experimental purposes, may be built.

Staff Appointed

Thus far appointed to the staff of the Laboratory of Nuclear Studies, in addition to the coordinating committee and under Bacher's direction, are Professors Lyman G. Parratt, Kenneth I. Greisen, PhD '43, Boyce D. McDaniel, PhD '43, Dale R. Corson (all of whom were loaned to the atom bomb project by the Physics Department), Richard P. Feynman, Philip Morrison; Research Associates Charles P. Baker, PhD '41, Ernest D. Courant, John DeWire, Charles D. Swartz; Professor Franklin A. Long, Chemistry; with other members to be added.

Director Bacher, who was recently appointed to the Army Board of Scientists, has been a leader in the study of nuclear physics at the University since 1935, when he came from Columbia as instructor in Physics. He received the BS in 1926 and the PhD in 1930 at the University of Michigan, studied at California Institute of Technology and MIT on National Research Fellowships in physics, returned to Michigan, and went to Columbia as instructor in 1934. Promoted to assistant professor here in 1937, associate professor in 1940, and professor in 1945, he was on leave of absence beginning in 1941, first with the Government Radiation Laboratory at MIT and since 1943 at Los Alamos. In Washington, D. C., last March, Major General Leslie R. Groves, in charge of the Manhattan Engineer District, presented Bacher with the nation's highest award for civilians, the Medal for Merit. His citation, signed by President Harry F. Truman, is for "important research and development of fundamental parts of the bomb. . . his initiative and resourcefulness, and his unselfish and unswerving devotion to duty have contributed vitally to the success of the Atomic Bomb Project."

AAUW Officers

NEW YORK State convention of the American Association of University Women elected Mrs. Walter Muir (Dorothy Saunders) '30 of Schenectady, first vice-president of the State organization. President is Mrs. Austin P. Evans of Montrose, whose husband is a member of the Class of '11; and the wife of Dr. Frank N. Dealy '13 of Plandome is third vice-president.

Veterinary Honors

PRESIDENT Edmund E. Day awarded prizes for excellence to students in the Veterinary College at this year's "honor day" in Willard Straight Hall. The gathering of Faculty and students was addressed by Dr. Andrew L. McNabb, principal of Ontario Veterinary College at Guelph, Can., who spoke on "Our Task." A dance sponsored by the Cornell junior chapter of the AVMA followed.

Jane Miller Prize of $40 in physiology was divided between Mary C. Hallenbeck '47 of Hoffmans and John H. Graves '46 of Hartsville, Pa. First Charles Gross Bondy Prize of $25 for practical medicine and surgery of small animals went to Robert E. Bardwall '46 of Lexington, Ky.; second of $15 to Robert A. Field '46 of Ithaca. First James Gordon Bennett Prize of $25 for humaneness with animals in anaesthesia went to Robert W. Kirk '46 of Stamford, Conn.; second of $15 to Roger W. Batchelder '46 of Riverhead. Prize of $50 for the best essay on poultry diseases was won by Julius J. Haberman '46 of New York City.

Henry M. Doremus, MS '38, of Towaco, N. J., now a Veterinary Senior, won the first Horace K. White Prize of $50 for the best academic record for the entire course, with John R. Steele of Schodack Landing, second. These two also won the first and second Anne Besse Prizes in medicine and clinical diagnosis and first and second Mary Louise Moore Prizes in bacteriology. Doremus was also awarded the Alpha Psi Prize of a $25 Victory Bond as the Senior who has shown himself best equipped to advance the standards of veterinary medicine. Mrs. Doremus (Helen Borchmann) '39 was given honorable mention for the Horace K. White Prizes as a Veterinary Senior in 1940.

Letters

Subject to the usual restrictions of space and good taste, we shall print letters from subscribers on any side of any subject of interest to Cornellians. The ALUMNI NEWS often may not agree with the sentiments expressed, and disclaims any responsibility beyond that of fostering interest in the University.

More on "Legacies"

TO THE EDITOR:

Who is right?: Houston '15, Patricia Leary '45, or Halsted '14? Are we going to start that old discussion: "Which comes first, the hen or the egg?"

Cornell alumni honor the University according to what they were able to learn while there, and chiefly because of their own personal character.

Character, if previously well moulded, is hardened about the time we are enjoying the privileges of a college training. The friendly words we hear from our teachers at such a place as Cornell have a tremendous influence in our lives afterwards. Men such as Robert Thurston, William Durant, Harris Ryan, David Hoy, Crandall, Church, Corson, and don't let us forget Courtney, Moakley, and others, whom we met as our guides while at Cornell, are they not men to be remembered the rest of our lives? Do they not bear a great influence on our actions as we grow old?

The "right time" to be at Cornell is the time we were there, and we did probably contribute a little to make it so. As we acquire worldly experience and use the knowledge obtained at Cornell, we may become as valuable to humanity as our forefathers were, but don't let us become swollen-headed by thinking we make Cornell.

Medal for Merit presented to Professor Hans A. Bethe, "theoretical physicist of international distinction," by Major General Leslie R. Groves, "for outstanding service to the War Department . . . in connection with the development of the greatest military weapon of all time."

No, Cornell gave us such guidance as we were willing to accept, and put at our disposal experience and knowledge which enabled us to develop our own personalities so as to properly reflect back to it honor and gratitude. Do we all do that?

When I was received at Cornell, although the school was chosen because of the influence of an old Cornellian, this was not known at the University. Durant, Hoy, and others who had to do with my start at the University gave me, in spite of the fact that I was a foreigner and English was not my language, all the help they could. The rest was up to me, and that is, I feel as it should be.

Do we choose our relatives? No! Then why not follow the example of the Founder of the University, who preferred to leave the religious circle of his parents and marry where he had chosen, to using the influence of his relatives in moulding his life? Democracy should not allow distinctions of any kind between individuals which they have not earned by their character, kindness, and uprightness.

If, when entering Cornell, students have behind them a Cornell lineage, they should not ask for "priorities," but should feel they have greater responsibilities towards the University than those who are not so fortunate. If we are taught to take this attitude as we approach Cornell, and if we live to such a standard, Cornell will be invaluable to the future citizens of the world. —ROBERTO J. SHALDERS '04

TO THE EDITOR:

Anent the proposed policy of favoring Cornell legacies in admissions:

There is more to be said in favor of such a policy than arguments based wholly on sentiment or politics. Those in opposition presume that you can evaluate traits of character and intelligence with the same exactness with which ore is assayed or chemicals quantitatively or qualitatively tested.

This, of course, is ridiculous, and intelligent people know it. In the first place, the schoolmasters have not devised any tests nearly as accurate, and they themselves will admit it, I am sure. In the second place, granting that the paper record kept by the secondary school has such a high degree of accuracy that it may be presumed to be a fair report of the individual at the time it purports to represent, we must nevertheless take into account that the boys are being scored during their sturm und drang period of life, and even the most carefully compiled paper record should not be allowed to weigh too heavily in predicting future conduct.

On the other hand, the fact that an applicant has had one or more forebears in attendance at Cornell offers a clue that he may have such hereditary traits as would make him suitable material for our institution; granting, of course, that even in so selected company there may be occasional nincompoops and misfits, but in behalf of these we do not contend.

In conclusion, may the writer offer himself as a horrible example. I was not a legacy, but presented a very fine paper record in secondary school and made a very poor record, both scholastically and in activities of a more wholesome sort, in the University. On the other hand, second generation Cornellians who had not performed at all brilliantly in secondary school made much more creditable showings in the University.

Describes Student Aid

BOOKLET describing Scholarships and Financial Aid available to students at the University has been published by the University.

Scholarships open to undergraduates are listed with their annual value, tenure, and conditions of award, with brief information as to their sources. Following those which are open to students in all divisions are listed those which are administered by the various Colleges, Schools, and Departments for their students, and several which are awarded by organizations outside the University.

The booklet describes the terms on which loans are granted to students and the endowed loan funds from which they come.

Plays Win Prizes

FORBES Heermans Prizes for original one-act plays on an American theme have been awarded, first to Walter W. Scheinman '44 of Queens for his "Absent Without Tomorrow," and second, to Roy I. Friedlander '44 of Brooklyn for "Five Characters in Search of Saroyan." Scheinman, now enrolled in the Graduate School, is a co-author of the successful show, "Once Upon a Hill, or What Happened in Mr. Cornell's Cow Pasture," which the Dramatic Club has played to SRO audiences in seven performances. He was given special mention in the Forbes Heermans contest for a second play entered, "Mea Culpa." Friedlander has returned to the University as a Senior from military service, to major in Government.

Judges of this year's contest were Professors George J. Thompson, Law; Wallie A. Hurwitz, Mathematics; and Walter MacKellar '18, English.

Arts College Co-ordinates Literature, Language Courses

DIVISION of Literature has been organized in the College of Arts and Sciences, to coordinate the work of the Departments of English, Speech and Drama, Classics, Romance Literatures, German Literature, Chinese Studies, and Slavic Studies, and to offer new courses in the general field of literary appreciation and literary processes as a guide to human thought throughout history.

Chairman of a committee administering the new Division is Professor Thomas G. Bergin, Romance Literatures, who has recently returned as a lieutenant colonel from three years in the Army. Beginning as a civilian instructor in Italian at the Army School of Military Government at University of Virginia, he went overseas as director of universities with the Allied Commission in Italy and became deputy director of public relations for the Commission in Rome. Graduate of Yale in 1925, where he also taught Italian and Spanish, Professor Bergin came to the University in 1941 from Albany State Teachers College.

He has also been appointed acting chairman of the English Department, of which Professor George H. Sabine '03, Vice-president of the University, has been chairman the last two years.

To Give Wide View

President Edmund E. Day calls the new organization "a logical step in education for the contemporary world. Just as science has found it profitable and stimulating to do away with the old boundaries between specialized subjects, so it was felt that the field of the humanities, and particularly, literature, would gain by offering the student a wider view than has been possible under a departmentalized curriculum. Students majoring in literature will have opportunity to specialize in a given language or field, and we feel that this specialization will be of greater value because it is based on a broader understanding of the field of literature and the humanities."

Individual Departments will continue their own teaching, with additional courses to be offered next fall under auspices of the Division. Visiting professor of Literature next year will be Lucien Wolff, who was professor of English literature and dean of the faculty at the University of Rennes, France, and since the liberation has been rector of the University. During the German occupation of Brittany, he was held as a hostage. From China next year comes Professor Harold E. Shadick as visiting professor of Chinese Literature. Chairman of the department of western languages and in charge of Chinese studies for foreign students at Yen Ching University in Peking, he was captured by the Japanese and during internment, organized study groups on Chinese literature for American students interned with him.

Coordinate with the organization of the Division of Literature, Dr. J. Milton Cowan has been appointed professor of German and director of the Division of Modern Languages for which the University received a five-year grant from the Rockefeller Foundation last December. This Division will comprise language instruction in Chinese, French, German, Italian, Russian, Spanish, and English courses for foreign students. Besides the traditional instruction, students will be taught colloquial speech by hearing recorded voices and making their own recordings to compare with those of experts, and under direction of native "informants" will get practice in writing and speaking among themselves.

As director of the intensive language program of the American Council of Learned Societies since 1942, Professor Cowan was consultant to the War and State Departments on the new methods of teaching languages which were developed during the war for quick proficiency in speaking and reading. He received the AB in 1931 and the MA in 1932 at University of Utah; studied Germanics at University of California and experimental phonetics at University of Iowa, where he received the PhD in 1935, received a post-doctoral research fellowship and was assistant professor of German, and from 1938-42 was director of the modern language phonetics laboratory.

Aid Mental Health

AMONG the distinguished sponsors of the newly-formed National Mental Health Foundation, Former US Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts has announced the names of Lessing J. Rosenwald '13 and Pearl S. Buck, AM '25. With cooperation of prominent psychiatrists, hospital administrators, and lawyers, the Foundation will undertake "to help interpret to the public the nature of mental illness and mental deficiency; to cooperate with others in promotion of mental health; to seek higher standards of care and treatment in mental hospitals" in this country. Its offices are at 3500 Lancaster Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Community Enjoys Arts Festival

SECOND Festival of Contemporary American Arts was arranged by the Departments of Fine Arts, Speech and Drama, Music, and Architecture, for the week of May 26-June 2. Carefully staged to show the importance of modern arts in bringing about "an understanding and an enrichment of contemporary life," it presented colorfully and informatively the accomplishments today in music, painting, sculpture, architecture, the theatre, and the dance.

The Festival included exhibits of paintings and sculpture by representative American artists and local artists, architectural and landscape sketches and plans, dance photographs, ceramics, and textiles, in the Memorial Room of Willard Straight Hall. Some of the paintings were displayed in the Music Room, where every easy chair was occupied by students listening to recorded contemporary music, Sunday afternoon.

Later, compositions by five students of Professor Robert M. Palmer, Music, were presented in Barnes Hall. Two piano solos, "Sirocco" and "Variations on a Theme of Schumann," were performed by the respective composers, Gertrude Rivers '47 and Mrs. Eunice Dittmar '48. Mrs. Ruth E. Polson, AM '42, contralto, sang three groups of songs by Mrs. Martha Laidenheimer '49, Patricia Strickler '46, and Sidney Cox '43. Most noteworthy number was Miss Rivers's choral fantasy on the American folk-song, "Peter Gray," ably rendered by a small mixed-choir ensemble, a string quartet, and two clarinets.

Monday evening, the University Theatre showed a program of documentary motion pictures, repeated the following Sunday. Included were Walt Disney's first colored Silly Symphony, "Flowers and Trees," and Pare Lorenz's story of the Mississippi River basin, "The River," from the Museum of Modern Arts film library. Those who attended, on leaving the Theater, with Mississippi floods fresh in mind, met a terrific downpour. In fact, damp rainy weather birthed with the Festival and stayed with it to the very end.

University Theatre players contributed two programs in the Willard Straight Theater. Friday evening, the Laboratory Theatre repeated its production of Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author." The verbal marathons of this play on philosophy and theory of drama were not minded too much as delivered by Paul P. Pettit, AM '43, as The Father. Mary A. Thompson scored as the vivacious and unabashed Stepdaughter. The play was directed by Professor Alex M. Drummond. An excellent production of Saryoyan's "The Beautiful People" was staged the next day by the Dramatic Club. Under the direction of Professor Drummond, the cast gave a mature and convincing performance. Also well presented was "Pullman Car Hiawatha," one of Thornton Wilder's earlier one-act pieces in "Our Town" style, with a large cast and speaking chorus. It was directed by Professor H. Darkes Albright, PhD '36.

Festival event that drew the largest audience was a concert Saturday night in Bailey Hall by the Jane Dudley-Sophie Maslow-William Bales Dance Trio, assisted by ten members of the New Dance Group of New York City and by guitarists Tony Kraber and Woodie Guthrie. This was a program to delight those who find modern dance incomprehensible, for by superb technique the Trio succeeded in projecting full, rich experiences of their thought and intent to the audience. The Trio and New Dance Group combined in the finale "Folksay," a cycle of eight dances based on Carl Sandburg's "The People, Yes." This number brought Kraber, who is the husband of Wilhelmina Barton '31, and Guthrie, with their guitars, to the front of the stage.

Sunday, in Barnes Hall auditorium, a lecture on "A Critic's Credo" was given by George Freedley, curator of the theatre collection of the New York Public Library and dramatic critic for The Morning Telegraph.

Festival Symphony Orchestra, composed of forty members of the Rochester Philharmonic Orchestra and students and faculty from the University and Ithaca College, directed by Professor John M. Kuypers, Music, and the Sage Chapel Choir, directed by University Organist Donald J. Grout, united in a grand performance of the works of modern American composers in Bailey Hall, June 2, to end the week. Present and roundly applauded were Professor Palmer, whose "K 19," an elegy for Thomas Wolfe, was premiered; Ross Lee Finney, whose "Pilgrim Psalms" for chorus and orchestra was given its first performance; and Burrill Phillips, composer of the opening selection, "Dance Suite" from the ballet, "Step into My Parlor."

Members of the Festival committee, headed by Professor Kuypers, were May Atherton, Physical Education; Thomas J. Baird '25, Home Economics; Michael R. Hanna, manager of Station WHCU; and Professors Norman Daly, Fine Arts; Alex M. Drummond, Director of the University Theatre; Donald J. Grout and Robert M. Palmer, Music; Virginia True, Home Economics; Frederick O. Waage, Art and Archeology; and Kenneth L. Washburn '26, who designed an attractive program booklet on the Festival. Financial contributions were acknowledged from the University and from Trustees Frank E. Gannett '98, Stanton Griffis '10, and Myron C. Taylor '94.

Name Dormitory

NEW dormitory for women which is being built north of Balch Halls has been officially named by the Trustees, Clara Dickson Hall, in memory of the mother of Andrew Dickson White, the University's first President. President White in his Autobiography credits his mother with being chiefly responsible for the decision to admit women to the University. "The strongest influence in this matter," he says, "was exercised upon me by my mother." He relates that his mother told him, "I am not sure about your other ideas, but as to the admission of women you are right."

A tablet will be placed in the building noting the influence of President White's mother in the establishment of Cornell as a co-educational university and that the new dormitory is the successor to Sage College. Sage is scheduled to be razed to make way for the projected new buildings of the Engineering College. The new building, estimated to cost about $1,600,000 for construction and furnishings, is designed to accommodate approximately 425 women students. It is being rushed to completion for the fall term (see cover).

A room in Clara Dickson Hall will be named in memory of Susanna Phelps Gage '79, in accordance with the terms of a gift made to the University shortly after her death in 1915 by her husband, the late Professor Simon H. Gage '77, and her son, Henry Phelps Gage '08. They gave $2,000 "to be used for one of the rooms of a new residential hall for women" as a memorial to their wife and mother, and this sum has now accumulated to more than $7,000. Mrs. Gage was one of the thirty women who first lived in Sage College. She received the PhB in 1880, and the next year she was married to Professor Gage. She became interested in her husband's work in Anatomy, at first chiefly in illustrating his scientific papers for publication. Later, she assisted in his research, travelled with him to scientific meetings, and herself contributed to technical journals numerous papers on anatomy and embryology. She was instrumental in establishing the Government-supported National University in Washington, D. C., for original research, gave her family home to her native village of Morrisville as a library, and wrote verses and science stories for children.

Toward construction of Clara Dickson Hall the Trustees have also appropriated the Women's Dormitory Account which has been accumulating with the University since 1917. This account was set up by the Treasurer as the result of a campaign of the Cornellian Council at the instance of the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs, to collect gifts from alumnae and their friends for this purpose. Katharine R. Buckley '01 was chairman of a women's dormitory fund committee of six members and the aid of all Cornell Women's Clubs was enlisted. In November, 1916, the committee reported that approximately 120 women had subscribed more than $6,000. Subsequent gifts from Clubs and individuals and accumulated interest have brought the Account to more than $10,000.

Three Run Hotel

THREE Cornell hotelmen are associated as executives of the Hotel Tampa Terrace in Tampa, Fla. Frank J. Irving '35, recently discharged as a major in the Army Air Corps after service in the Africa campaign and the China-Burma-India Theatre, is general manager. Food manager is James C. Muth '42, winner of the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in the Sicily landing as a lieutenant, and who was wounded at Anzio. Comptroller is Arthur V. V. Taft '26, who was formerly at the Embassy Hotel in Tampa.

Hotel Tampa Terrace has recently completed an expansion program that cost more than $200,000.

Now, in My Time!

By Conan Barry

IT pleases Campus dwellers that the alumni are coming back again for Class Reunions. For the moment we've had our fill of novel enterprises, new ways, and daring ventures. We clutch eagerly at all things which recall old days and familiar practices.

American institutions of higher learning employ experts nowadays to butter their graduates with kind words and convince them of their importance to the university. And not without some measure of success! In more than a few individual cases, these efforts have proved almost too successful.

But Class Reunions amend all, restore balances, deflate the bump-tious, re-establish a more accurate sense of relative values, and sometimes remind the thoughtless that the University continues to be an influence in their lives long after it has sent them forth misbranded as a finished product.

Campus dwellers don't mind! With a good-natured twinkle in their eyes they observe the efforts of their former students to impress them, well knowing that it takes no more than a single June twilight on the Library slope, the music of bells, a single soft night under the stars in nostalgic surroundings, to work a complete cure for all that ever ails alumni.

Your old professor will listen politely when you tell him about your business successes, your arthritis, your family and your golf score, but all the time he is taking you apart and searching your soul to see what kind of a person you've turned out to be. Have you acquired with the years an understanding mind, a humble and a contrite heart? And if he finds that you have, he'll take you again to his bosom, for he'll recognize in you one of his business successes.

It's interesting, too, to observe the adjustments going on among the Classmates themselves. After middle life the bifocals are slow in picking up the names on the buttons which are falsely supposed to identify old friends. It's hard to recognize in stylish stouts, in ponderous executives, the same lissome youths who once kicked a goal, or took third place in the broad jump, or showed an unsuspected sprinting ability in escaping the clutches of Ithaca's Gestapo.

Some years back, Henry Burgweger '04 made a suggestion which, it seemed to us, never received the attention in high places that it merited. It was Henry's idea that it would save embarrassment for everybody if after the Tenth all pretense of remembering names were to be frankly abandoned. At the Fifteenth everybody would be addressed as Charlie. It would be George at the Twentieth, Albert at the Twenty-fifth, and so on up through the crowding years.

However, these and other matters quickly become unimportant at Ithaca in June. It takes no more than one night on the Library slope, watching the twilight fade over Enfield and the stars come out above Connecticut Hill, to re-establish abandoned standards of appraisal, to level off the differences that life has brought about, to cast down the mighty and exalt them of low degree.

It's one of the defects in the scheme which guides the destiny of mankind that the individual seldom realizes what life is for until it's too late for him to do anything about it. Attendance at one's Class Reunion sometimes speeds the process and accelerates the coming of understanding. It's a not uncommon experience for alumni to sense—out back of the War Memorial, perhaps, at two o'clock in the morning—that their undergraduate ambitions for themselves are never going to be realized; that their own lives are going to be justified, if at all, only in the accomplishments of their children; that their contact with the University is the one fact about them most likely to live and be remembered. A hundred years from now all other records will have vanished, but it will always be graven on the enduring tablets of your University that you once existed, got 68 in English I, and in your Sophomore year took second place in the pole vault at the underclass track meet.

To House Veterans

BARRACKS and other temporary housing for 1440 students will be provided next fall in buildings now erected, under construction, or arranged for on and near the Campus. Latest acquisition announced by the University housing committee is ten barracks from Sampson Naval Training Center to be erected near Kline Road, northeast of the Observatory. These will accommodate 600 single veterans, and 540 more will be quartered in the group of former Army barracks which are going up south and west of the Baker dormitories below West Avenue. Besides the 100 married veterans now housed in Vetsburg at East Ithaca, 64 more families will be housed in an adjoining community immediately to the east, and 136 families in temporary buildings at the eastern end of Tower Road, near the Federal Nutrition Laboratory.

These buildings are all provided, transported to Ithaca, and erected by the Federal Public Housing Authority, whose resident engineer, John H. Weidman '03, has established an office in Olin Hall. He came to Ithaca from war service with FPFA in Florida.

State of New York under its emergency housing program defrays costs of preparing the sites, making engineering layouts, and remodelling certain existing buildings which may be used for additional housing, such as the Glen Springs Hotel in Watkins. Carl C. Tallman '07 is resident architect for the State here.

Approximate cost to the University of the emergency housing thus far provided is $320,000, of which about one-third was incurred in the original Vetsburg development, before the FPFA program became effective. The University will acquire title and control of all FPFA units, with standards for selecting tenants, rentals, and operating budgets subject to FPFA approval. Unless the period of use is extended by the National Housing Administration, the University must dismantle and remove the buildings two years after the emergency is declared over, paying costs of removal but entitled to sell salvaged material.

Represents Cornell

PRESIDENT John C. Adams '26 of Hofstra College, Hempstead, was the official delegate of Cornell University at an academic convocation at Adelphi College, Garden City, June 1, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the chartering of Adelphi.

Club Starts Again

AT a luncheon meeting of nineteen alumnae, May 11 at the Tower Inn near Amsterdam, the Cornell Women's Club of Fulton and Montgomery Counties was reactivated. Guests were Pauline J. Schmid '25, Assistant Alumni Secretary of the University, and Mrs. Arthur Newkirk (Katherine Doring) '35, president, and Madeline A. Dunsmore '28 of the Cornell Women's Club of Schenectady. Mrs. John A. May (Johanna Stolte) '05, of Gloversville, former vice-president of the Club, presided at a business meeting at which Mrs. Harry A. Mullen (Fannie Wheeler) '30 of Amsterdam was elected president; Mrs. May was re-elected vice-president; Lucy J. Collins '06 of Hagaman, secretary; and Mrs. Clarence R. Liddle (Margaret Conlan) '18 of Johnstown, treasurer.

Intelligence

By Emerson Hinchliff '14

These National Scholarship winners, whose names are announced in this issue, are going to be distinct assets to the Campus. Eventually they should make good alumni, which, of course, appeals to a laborer in the Cornell vineyard. I took a few minutes off the other day to look over the records of the successful applicants. So fascinating was the task that I spent hours on it instead of minutes. What a wealth of talent we are attracting by the device of offering a really substantial stipend!

Here's the sample record of one winner, headed for Arts: No. 1 in a high-school class of 239; editor of school Annual; co-captain of basketball (all-conference player); football; co-captain tennis; Harvard Book Award; earned $1,000 in his four high-school years; calls mathematics a recreation.

Every one is in the top 20 percent of his class. For eight of the seventeen boys I found their precise standing: collectively they totalled No. 39 among 1179 students; i.e., in the top 3.22 per cent. One made a score of 1494 on the scholastic aptitude test of the College Boards, another 1469; both phenomenally high.

The seven girls seem to stand consistently Nos. 1 or 2 in their school classes, usually large ones. The girls run to editors and class presidents, plus a Bausch & Lomb and Reader's Digest award winner, a painter, a concert-master, two dramatic club members, and a head drum majorette from out in the Middle West where I am told that means something!

* * *

By this time, Joe Collech has given up hope, figuring I have already trotted out the one athlete selected. But wait a minute! The boys have brawn and skill along with their brains. I added up a few figures just for fun. Ten played football, one was co-captain. Nine played basketball, with three captains or co-captains. Six performed on the diamond. Five wielded the tennis racket, one a co-captain. Three played soccer. One was cross country captain. One each performed in golf, hockey, wrestling, and lacrosse. Of course, some are repeaters.

Four of the boys were editors. Seven were managers. One debated. Five were class presidents, one a vice-president, and one was president of the student council. I found a raft of miscellaneous memberships and awards, including a French prize.

Such a fine dilution of combined brains, brawn, and class-officer appeal should have a wholesome influence on the Campus.

Seven boys are headed for engineering, three for medicine, two for the law, one for the Episcopal ministry. One six-foot-two, 180-pounder, will never play football again since he had osteomyelitis; he got it through a knee injury in a school game and it was while he was nursing this injury that he decided to study medicine.

Two of the girls are daughters of Cornellians. One boy has alumni mother and grandfather. Another, not surprisingly, has a '14 father; page Harold Halsted!

By the way, remember that this is only the first year of National Scholarship awards, so if you see a really exceptional boy or girl coming along, put the bug in the youngster's ear. No hurry about applying. Application blanks will be ready again early next winter, available through the University committee on Cornell National Scholarships.

Tri-County Club Elects

TRI-COUNTY Cornell Women's Club, meeting last month at the Hotel Kingsbury in Hudson Falls, elected the following officers: Mrs. Raymond LaFarr (Frances M. Burns) '33 succeeding Mrs. Malcolm M. Parrish (Elsa Cornell) '15 as president; Mrs. Orson C. Beaman (Bernice Morrison) '30, vice-president; and Genevieve E. Bazinet '25, secretary-treasurer.

Club members donated twenty dollars to the Federation Scholarship Fund.

Establish New Degrees

BOARD of Trustees has authorized, at recommendation of the University Faculty, that the University grant, under jurisdiction of the Graduate School, the degrees of Master of Aeronautical Engineering and Master of Science in Industrial and Labor Relations.

Earlier, the Trustees had authorized the new degrees of Master of Business Administration and Master of Public Administration, to be conferred upon completion of advanced studies in the School of Business and Public Administration.

National Scholarships Awarded To Outstanding New Students

TWENTY-FOUR Freshmen who will enter the University next fall have been awarded the new Cornell National Scholarships which were authorized last December. Seventeen boys and seven girls were selected from more than 700 applicants from high schools and preparatory schools all over the country, not only on the basis of their scholastic grades but as outstanding student leaders and prospective Cornellians.

National Scholarships give free tuition in any undergraduate College of the University and $600 a year for the period normally required for a first degree, while the holder maintains a satisfactory standard of performance. The Trustees established the Scholarships from University funds, with expectation that eventually they will be supported by gifts through the Alumni Fund and by special gifts for this purpose from Cornellians and others.

First recipients of the Scholarships come from ten States; fifteen from public high schools and the others from Blair Academy, Culver Military Academy, Loomis School, Mercersburg Academy, Northwestern College Preparatory School, Peddie School, Phillips Exeter Academy, St. Albans School, and St. Paul's School. They will enter Agriculture, Arts and Sciences, and all four Schools of the College of Engineering.

Alumni Aid Selection

University committee of selection enlisted the assistance of many alumni all over the country, both through Cornell Clubs and individually, to interview and report on promising candidates, and these reports were considered together with reports from school officials as to grades, demonstrated intelligence, qualities of leadership, extracurricular activities, and character. President Edmund E. Day was chairman of the selection committee, with Secretary Edward K. Graham, PhD '38, Dean of the Faculty Carleton C. Murdock, PhD '10, Dean of Students Harold E. B. Speight, Director of Admissions Herbert H. Williams '25, Mrs. Robert C. Osborn (Agda Swenson) '20, and Alumni Trustee George R. Pfann '24.

Winners of the first Cornell National Scholarships, with the Colleges or Schools they will enter, are Jane Applebaum, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, Arts; William E. Bunyan, Highland Park, N. J., Mechanical Engineering; Robert W. Corrigan, Baltimore, Md., Arts; Richard C. Davis, son of Henry V. Davis '14, Culver, Ind., Arts;

Richard H. Hollobaugh, Franklin, N. J., Arts (Pre-med); Richard N. Houston, Kansas City, Mo., Electrical Engineering; Nancy B. Hubbard, Louisville, Ky., Arts (Chem); James R. Kennedy, Grosse Pointe, Mich., Arts; F. Alan Longley, Syracuse, Chemical Engineering; Donald R. McCurry, Garden City, Arts (Bus & Adm); Richard W. Pogue, Chevy Chase, Md., Arts (Law); William S. Reynolds, Watertown, Arts (Law); John F. Rose, Montclair, N. J., Arts (Pre-med); Audrey E. Rossman, Baltimore, Md., Arts; Carl W. Snyder, Camp Hill, Pa., Arts; Marion L. Steinmann, daughter of Edwin O. Steinmann '24, Rochester, Agriculture; Jean M. Thomas, daughter of Ray L. Thomas '27, Fairview Village, Ohio, Arts; Alta A. R. Turner, Verona, N. J., Arts; Russell C. Voorhis, Englewood, N. J., Civil Engineering; Robert C. West, Jr., Caldwell, N. J., Chemical Engineering; Ralph C. Williams, Chevy Chase, Md., Arts (Pre-med); Ruth A. Williams, Ballston Spa, Arts; Lawrence V. Woodworth, son of Mrs. Kathryn Terrasse Woodworth '22 and grandson of George L. Terrasse '96, Washington, D. C., Civil Engineering; Jonathan K. Woods, Washington, D. C., Mechanical Engineering.

Washington Speakers

DONALD H. MOYER, Assistant Director of Veterans Education at the University, spoke at the April 25 meeting of the Cornell Club of Washington, D. C., at the Dodge Hotel. He told of the work of his office and what the veterans of the armed forces are doing at the University.

Following month, May 22, seventy-five alumni returned to the Dodge to meet Dean Dexter S. Kimball, Engineering, Emeritus, who described the University's early days, illustrating his lecture with slides. Director of Admissions Herbert H. Williams '25 was also on hand to give the Washington group an idea of admissions problems on the Campus.

Guest of honor at the Club's weekly luncheon meeting May 30 was S. C. Thomas Sze '05, visiting this country from China for the second time since his graduation. A group of '05 and '06 men were present to greet him, including his brother, Dr. S. K. Alfred Sze '01, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States. Both Szes expect to attend Reunions in Ithaca.

Slants on Sports

By Bice Matera '27

WEATHER and the railroad strike upset Cornell's spring sports schedules in late May and early June.

Thursday evening, May 23, several of the track team went to the Lehigh station, headed for the Intercollegiates at Annapolis, Md. But trains had stopped running, and the athletes returned home. And so, for the first time, Cornell was not represented in the championship games. That same week end, the Dartmouth baseball squad traveled from Hanover to Ithaca by bus to keep its Eastern Intercollegiate League date with Cornell. The trip wasn't worth the effort. Between heavy showers, Cornell handed Dartmouth two defeats, 2-0 and 3-1.

One week later, on June 1, Yale arrived for another League doubleheader. Rain postponed play until Sunday, then until Monday. Each team won a game, Cornell by 3-1, thus handing Yale its first League defeat, and Yale by 4-1. Rain and a choppy Lake forced four crews to abandon their scheduled two-mile race on Cayuga for a one-mile test, in heats, on the more sheltered Inlet. Wisconsin emerged the victor.

Inlet Regatta

WISCONSIN oarsmen were the first into Ithaca. They arrived May 29 from Philadelphia where, on May 25, they had defeated Pennsylvania by a deck-length in the Henley distance of a mile and five-sixteenths. Pennsylvania and Princeton were on hand early Friday and as it turned out, Friday would have been the day for the regatta. Conditions were excellent. Saturday was ushered in with an all-night rain, forcing postponement of the Yale doubleheader in baseball, but it was hoped that the Lake would flatten out. It didn't, and the crews went to the Inlet.

Wisconsin opened the program finishing two-thirds of a length ahead of Pennsylvania and turning in the day's best time for the mile, 5:01. Pennsylvania was timed in 5:02.4. In the second preliminary heat, Cornell finished in 5:03, almost a length ahead of Princeton at 5:06.5.

In the final, Wisconsin pulled into the lead and was never headed. Rowing a high beat most of the way, Wisconsin won by a length and a half, timed in 5:08. Cornell's time was 5:14. Consolation race was won by Pennsylvania in 5:07 over Princeton at 5:10.6.

Cornell 150-pound Junior Varsity crew outrowed Princeton by a length and a quarter. The times: Cornell 5:29.5, Princeton 5:34.4.

Junior varsity race was won by Princeton in 5:08.6, with Cornell second in 5:14 and Pennsylvania third in 5:14.4.

Pennsylvania won the 150-pound Varsity contest in the closest battle of the day. Pennsylvania was timed in 5:15, Princeton in 5:15.6, and Cornell in 5:15.7.

Referee was Edward Ten Eyck, Syracuse crew coach. Chief judge was Professor Charles L. Durham '99, Classics, Emeritus, and timers were Norman G. Stagg '26 and Peter J. McManus '32, former oarsmen.

The week before, on Lake Carnegie at Princeton, N. J., the Cornell lightweight crews won two victories. The Varsity defeated Princeton by a length and a quarter and the Junior Varsity won by three and one-half lengths. The winning times for the Henley distance: Varsity 6:47, Junior Varsity 6:57.

Varsity boating for the Cayuga Inlet regatta was: Bow, George A. Fearn, Jr., USNR; 2, John L. Phelps '45; 3, William F. Hale, USNR; 4, Henry A. Parker '44; 5, Wilbur O. Gundlach '45; 6, Curtis B. Morehouse '45; 7, Captain Charles P. von Wrangell '47; stroke, Richard L. Randolph '48; coxswain, Lloyd L. Conable, USNR.

The crew will complete its season June 22 on Lake Washington, near Seattle. Harvard, the University of British Columbia, Wisconsin, MIT, California, and Washington will also compete at 2,000 meters (about a mile and quarter).

Win Three in League

IN SIX games, the baseball team broke even, but the three victories were achieved in League play.

On Hoy Field May 22, Syracuse, returning to intercollegiate competition in baseball after the war, handed Cornell a 4-3 defeat through superior hitting. Cornell used three pitchers in a vain effort to check the Syracuse batters.

On May 25, a heavy shower fell before the first game with Dartmouth, but hardly wet the ground. William J. Langan, USNR, Cornell's top pitcher, held Dartmouth to two hits, Cornell winning, 2-0, as William C. Arrison '48, left fielder, collected two of Cornell's four hits, including a double.

Another heavy shower delayed the start of the second game thirty-five minutes. Glen L. McAvoy '49 started for Cornell, but did not last the first inning. He went out of the game with a two-run lead, however, and was credited with being the winning pitcher after Charles F. P. Berman '46 turned in a top relief-hurling job.

On May 29, Rochester won, 7-4, on Hoy Field, collecting nine hits off three Cornell pitchers. Cornell put plenty of runners on the bases, but the batters failed to deliver in the pinches.

The Yale doubleheader, postponed forty-eight hours by rain, saw Cornell break Yale's League streak of four victories as Langan again turned in a two-hit performance. After pitching seven innings in the opener, Langan started and finished six innings in the second game, but he was touched for six hits. Yale bunched the blows in the second and third innings, to score twice in each frame.

League standing as of June 4:

	W	L	PC
Yale	5	1	.833
Columbia	5	3	.625
Pennsylvania	3	2	.600
Cornell	4	3	.571
Princeton	3	5	.375
Dartmouth	2	8	.200

Junior Varsity team, which played one game early in the season, a 14-12 victory over the Cortland State Teachers College Junior Varsity, twice tried to play a game with Sampson Naval Hospital. Twice rain prevented any play at all. Finally on June 4, the teams started a game on Hoy Field. The rains came again in the last of the fourth, with Cornell leading, 5-1.

The Varsity will play two games with the Sampson team at Commencement time, at Sampson June 21 and on Hoy Field June 22.

Golfers Win More

GOLF team, with the Eastern Intercollegiate Association title safely stowed away, continued undefeated, with victories over Colgate, 8-1, May 25, and Bucknell, 9-0, June 1, both on the University course. The Bucknell match was played in a pouring rain.

Tennis Breaks Even

TENNIS team broke even in two engagements, defeating Rochester, 7-2, on the Cascadilla courts May 25, thus evening the season's series; and losing to the US Military Academy, 8-1, at West Point, June 1.

Lacrosse Loses Two

LACROSSE team lost two more contests, dropping a 7-3 decision to Penn State on Alumni Field, May 25 and losing, 18-2, to the Military Academy at West Point, June 1. The team has yet to win a game.

Army Wins Polo

US MILITARY Academy polo team scored a 7-5 victory over Cornell in the first outdoor game on Alumni Field since before the war. The game was played before a Spring Day crowd, May 25.

Spring Day Revived

SPRING DAY May 25 was somewhat reminiscent of pre-war frolics, perhaps mainly to old-timers in its promise of better Spring Days to come.

All of the thirty-eight fraternities that are operating had houseparties duly registered with the Dean of Students and with approved chaperones. Some of these were alumni couples from out of town, but many were married students and their wives who had been interviewed before approval.

Spring Day parade consisted of four fraternity floats, of which the one titled "Phi Kappa Psi Follies" was awarded the prize cup by the judges, Dean Harold E. B. Speight, Foster M. Coffin '12, and Robert J. Kane '34. "Carnival" took some celebrants to Kite Hill to participate in games and catch-penny devices within a roped-off space behind the Crescent.

Octagon Club, which was organized last year to present annual original musical comedies on the Campus, contributed as its offering this year "Rogues in Togas," which nearly filled Bailey Hall for its two performances. In mid-week before the show, a committee of the Club crowned Barbara A. Moore '48 as Spring Day Week End Queen on the steps of Willard Straight Hall, and the Queen and her court selected the six-foot-nine basketball center, Edward T. Peterson '48 as "Apollo" on the Bailey Hall stage before the first performance.

"Rogues in Togas" depicted the fanciful adventures of Ulysses and his return to his wife, Penelope, in an Ithaca, Greece, that strangely resembled the portico of Goldwin Smith Hall. William A. Miller '46 played the hero; Penelope was M. Therese Driscoll '47.

coll '47; Betty W. Britton '46 was an alluring Circle; and George L. Landon '44 was a knowing and fearsome Cyclops. Script, songs, dances, costumes, and staging were all the work of members of the Club.

Innovation at the Navy Ball was at least one sorority "box" among those of fraternities that lined an enlarged dancing space in Barton Hall. It was crowded with dancers who braved the rain to enjoy the music of Charlie Spivak's orchestra, interspersed with that of a student band led by Richard E. Flight '47. Chairmen of the Navy Ball committee were Marilyn E. Manger '46 and Donald P. Berens, USNR.

Scientists at Bikini

ELECTRONIC apparatus designed and built in the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory at Buffalo will enable scientists to observe instantaneously and from a safe distance the explosive effects of the Bikini Atoll atom bomb tests, July 1.

Karl D. Swartzel, assistant head of the Laboratory's physics department, says the new equipment, assembled aboard a target ship, will transmit data and record it at a receiving station aboard the USS Avery Island. Swartzel and three other engineers from his department, Franz Allebach, Robert Kell, and Neils Andersen, have left the Cornell Laboratory to participate in the Bikini tests.

From the Campus, Professor John G. Kirkwood, Chemistry, member of the scientific advisory board of the Navy Department's Bureau of Ordnance, was to leave by plane for the Pacific site of the tests. He will assist with the Navy's report on the effects of the A-bomb operations.

Adams in Chicago

PROVOST Arthur S. Adams brought news from the Campus to the luncheon meeting of the Cornell Club of Chicago, Ill., June 6 at the University Club.

Speaker May 16 was Colonel Claire W. Hardy '11, who told of experiences in India, from which he had recently returned.

Hotelmen Meet

ANNUAL meeting of the Cornell Society of Hotelmen brought forty members to Willard Straight Hall during Hotel Ezra Cornell. With President Charles I. Sayles '26 in the chair, Professor Howard B. Meek reported on scholarships in the Department and for the Ithaca office of the Society's placement committee, and H. Victor Grohmann '28 reported on the activities of his New York City placement office. Emmet J. Murphy '22, Alumni Secretary of the University, spoke briefly of the program of the Association and the Society's part in it.

Nominating committee proposed the name of Henry B. Williams '30, manager of the Dodge Hotel, Washington, D. C., to be elected as president by mail ballot, to take office in June. Edgar A. Whiting '29, assistant director of Willard Straight Hall, was elected first vice-president, and Lynn P. Himmelman '33 of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel, Seattle, Wash., was elected second vice-president. Whiting, recently returned from duty as a lieutenant in the Naval Reserve, will resume editorship of the Bulletin of the Society which has been conducted by President Sayles. Professor John Courtney '25, Hotel Administration, was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Former directors of the Society from the even-year Classes were all re-elected for two-year terms, and Richard J. Selby '46, managing director of Hotel Ezra Cornell this year, was added to the board. Re-elected directors are Walter T. Bovard '26, Lawrence L. Benway '28, James A. Morrison '30, Robert C. Trier, Jr. '32, Victor F. Ludewig '34, Elmer L. Olsen '36, Carlton G. Norris '38, J. William Conner '40, David W. Newsom '42, and John D. Lesure '44.

Annual picnic was at Stewart Park, and members were among the 240 guests served by the student staff at the Hotel Ezra Cornell dinner in Martha Van Rensselaer Hall and many attended the dance following in Willard Straight Memorial Room. Managing Director Selby was toastmaster at the dinner and the speakers were Dean Sarah G. Blanding of the College of Home Economics, Dean of Students Harold E. B. Speight, Professor Howard B. Meek, Hotel Administration, and H. Alexander MacLennan '26, assistant general manager of Cardy Hotels in Canada.

Books

By Cornellians

Fourth Killer-diller

Wake for a Lady. By Henry W. Roden '18. William Morrow & Co., New York City, 1946. 246 pages, $2.

This is "Tex" Roden's fourth murder thriller, which he writes as surcease from his cares and duties as a business executive. A book columnist in The New York Times recently said that although his publishers are experts in estimating sales of "who-dun-its," they have come out well in accepting this author's advice to print 6,500 copies of his first one, You Only Hang Once, two years ago; 8,500 of Too Busy to Die; 12,000 of One Angel Less; and have printed 15,000 copies of this one.

Again the never-failing Johnny Knight and his pal, Sid Ames, solve the mystery with the aid of gorgeous gals and in spite of the police. But not without a lot of shooting and tough characters in a swiftly-paced yarn of the underworld that is good for an evening's relaxation almost any time.

Educating Liberally

Educating Liberally. By Hoyt H. Hudson, PhD '23. Stanford University Press, Stanford University, Cal. 1945. vii+20 pages, $2.

The late Hoyt Hudson, graduate instructor in Public Speaking from 1920-23, later head of the English department at Princeton, and professor of English at Stanford from 1942 until his death in June, 1944, completed a little more than half of what he intended to write on "the ways—not the way, for there is more than one—in which a liberal education can be offered and administered."

Realistically and with admirable demonstration of his own thesis, he considers a liberal education to be compounded of information, operative logic or clear thinking, and imagination. He applies these considerations clearly and aptly to present conditions, in society and in schools and colleges. He thus sums up his view of education: "I must dissociate myself from those who look upon education as a process of becoming adjusted to one's environment, if the word 'adjusted' is to be taken in the mechanical sense or if its use assumes the environment and the person to be qualitatively undifferentiated. I share in the possibly naive notion that people who aim at adjustment tend to fall into pragmatic acquiescence with things as they are, giving no weight to the original and unique force of the human spirit, which is not necessarily 'subdued to what it works in, like the dyer's hand.' . . . I prefer that the process of education shall be described as 'understanding' one's environment and one's own self. 'Becoming socially adjusted' may imply this work of understanding; but for the sake of clarity I use the terms I feel most familiar with."

Life After Death

Across the Borderline. By Professor Charles V. P. Young '99, Physical Education, Emeritus. Richard R. Smith, New York City. 1946. 127 pages, $2.

Professor Young describes his conception of life after death and the plan of the universe. As the "soul" of a soldier killed in battle, he travels through cosmic spaces and finds a civilization and a society which contrasts strongly with that of the living world and offers abiding hope for the future.

"As a candidate for the Ministry," he says in his Foreword, "I was at one time immersed in the study and classification of these doctrines and creeds, at the same time attempting to formulate a conception of my own which would in some measure satisfy a few of my intellectual perplexities. Needless to say, my efforts did not meet with great success, either at that time or during the few years of my actual Ministry; but in more recent years, and notwithstanding its seeming futility, I have returned to the task. It is a form of mental pabulum which certainly has as much to commend it as, let us say, the current picture puzzle fad."

State To Run Sampson

PRESIDENT Edmund E. Day and the presidents of nine other up-State colleges and universities have been designated by the State Board of Regents as incorporators of the Associated Colleges of Upper New York, to establish temporary colleges "at one or more of the following places: US Naval Training Center at Sampson, Fort Plattsburgh at Plattsburgh, Rhoads Hospital at Utica, and at such other sites as may be further authorized by the Regents." Other incorporators, under a three-year charter expiring August 31, 1949, are the presidents of Colgate, Clarkson, Hamilton, Hobart and William Smith, Rensselaer, Rochester, St. Lawrence, Syracuse, and Union.

Sampson Naval Training Center on Seneca Lake, northwest of Ithaca, will be turned over for use by the State to give a two-year college course for war veterans and others, the first to be operated under the new board of the Associated Colleges. Facilities of the Naval Hospital at Sampson are being retained by the Navy.

Engineers Wanted

NAVY Department Bureau of Aeronautics, Washington 25, D. C., announces that it needs civilian engineers with experience in airplane structure, engines, armament, and instrument equipment, and will also employ mechanical, chemical, electrical, and radio engineers. Salaries range from $2980 to $8750 a year.

Ithaca Women Picnic

THIRTY members of the Cornell Women's Club of Ithaca enjoyed their annual meeting May 27 with a picnic at the Freeville home of Mrs. Chilion W. Sadd (Arlene Nuttall) '32, president of the Club.

Annual reports were read, contributions totalling twenty dollars were made by those present, and the following officers were elected for two-year terms: vice-president, Maralyn Winsor '45, daughter of Professor A. L. Winsor, PhD '29, Hotel Administration; secretary, Mrs. Lauren E. Bly (Elinore Wood) '38; and director, Helena H. Haight '08.

Long Island Elects

CORNELL Women's Club of Long Island at its annual meeting May 15 adopted a new constitution, following the form suggested by the Federation of Cornell Women's Clubs and presented by Mrs. Wallace T. Smith (Marian Walbancke) '29. The Club elected as vice-president Mrs. Howard H. Campbell (Ruth Neiswanger), who attended the Summer Session in 1924; corresponding secretary, Jean L. Welch '36; treasurer, Mrs. Donald Kempton (Barbara Fretz) '23; director, Mrs. Charles Pacifico (Beatrice Ramagli) '30. Mrs. Paul H. Crago (Grace Ingram) '33 presided at the meeting, which was at the home of Mrs. Joseph F. Glaccum (Gertrude Shelton) '20 in Baldwin.

Guests were Janet E. Buhsen '46 and Marion E. Graham '46, February graduates. Music was provided by Mildred Abrams, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Elmer G. Lawrence (Eleanor Foster) '14.

Artists in Stone

FIRST-HAND information of some of the interesting carvings on Campus buildings, engendered by Dean Dexter S. Kimball's article on the subject which we published last November 1, comes from Fred D. Smith '92. Smith also corrects our editorial statement, introducing Dean Kimball's article, that the stone owl above the porch of Boardman Hall was carved by Robert Richardson, whom President White brought from England to do the carvings on the President's House and who also decorated Sage College and Sage Chapel.

"I was at Cornell continuously from 1887 until 1897," Smith writes, "during which time the new Library was built. I am not sure whether Boardman Hall was built before the Library or afterwards, but the carving done on the Library I know was not by Richardson, but under an Englishman named John Allen, whom we affectionately called 'Pop.' His two very able assistants were John Quayle, from the Isle of Man, and Robert Birnie from Scotland. We all roomed in the same boarding house on old Hazen Street, and many is the time that I climbed up the scaffolding where they were doing the carving on the Library building.

"Perhaps Dean Kimball will agree that the work on the Library is as good as that which Richardson did on President White's house and on the Sage Chapel, but I recall Mr. Allen telling us that he had many talks with President White and was told by him how happy he was to find an artist of Pop's ability to succeed Richardson. He had feared that there would be no one in America who could properly succeed that great artist. . . . Pop Allen, who did all the blocking out of the main figures, used to say, 'We do not carve these figures from the stone. They are already in the stone and we simply knock away the pieces of stone to release them."

"Therefore, it is my opinion that if Boardman Hall was built immediately before or after the Library was built, the owl in question was not carved by Richardson but by John Allen of London, England."

Boardman Hall was completed in 1892, the year after the University Library building was finished. We are glad to correct the record concerning the distinctive carvings on both Boardman Hall and the Library, some of which are reproduced here from our series, "How Well Do You Know Cornell?" As we did for all the winners in that contest to identify interesting examples of Campus architecture, we have sent Smith a copy of Carl Becker's book, Cornell University: Founders and the Founding, with compliments of the ALUMNI NEWS and its publishers, Cornell University Press.

Connecticut Officers

NEW officers of the Cornell Women's Club of Western Connecticut are Mrs. Frank C. Wilcoxson (Elizabeth Facius) '25 of Riverside, president; Mrs. Paul P. McClellan (Marion Whipple) '30 of Old Greenwich, vice-president; Mrs. Richard Seipt (Virginia Barthel) '32 of Darien, recording secretary; Frances A. Hurd '02 of Norwalk, treasurer. Mrs. Charles E. Craven (Charlotte Baber) '08 of Norwalk was re-elected corresponding secretary. Annual meeting was May 12 at the home of Mrs. Ralph R. Curtis (Dorothy Brennan) '23 in Wilton.

Mrs. John Warnock (Helen Holme) '28, the Club's second member to be an assemblywoman in the Connecticut State legislature, told of her experiences in government. Among the twenty-three members present was Mrs. Albert H. Emery (Julia McClune) '04, who was formerly in the legislature.

Men Golf, Eat, Talk

THIRTY-NINE golfing members of the Cornell Club of Lehigh Valley spent the afternoon of May 24 on the links of Saucon Valley Country Club, Bethlehem, Pa., and then met for dinner in the clubhouse.

President Richard W. Crannell '28 of Easton presided, and guests of honor were University Secretary Edward K. Graham, PhD '38, and football Coach Ed McKeever who discussed, respectively, the University's record fall enrollment of 9,000 students, and the bright gridiron prospects due to the return of veterans with football experience.

Next Issue Delayed

TO BRING you news of Commencement and Class Reunions in Ithaca, June 21 and 22, the next issue of the ALUMNI NEWS will be delayed. It will be mailed to subscribers July 10.

With the University returning this year to two terms and a summer vacation period, the NEWS will publish monthly in July, August, and September. Our next issue will be for July, and the August and September issues should reach subscribers shortly after the first of those months. Beginning October, we shall resume publication the first and fifteenth of every month.

NEWS office in Alumni House at 3 East Avenue will be open throughout Reunions and we hope you will visit us. Special notice to Reunion Class secretaries about Reunion stories and pictures for the July issue appears on page 466.

On The Campus and Down the Hill

Campus elms have suffered three casualties recently. Last year, the one at the southwest corner of Boardman Hall, whose arched branches have framed a thousand snapshots of the Library Tower, was cut down. A short while back, the big one at the southwest corner of Sage College was also felled. And soon after, the first of the Ostrander Elms, which have shaded East Avenue for sixty-six years, came down on the northwest corner of the Campus Road intersection. The reason in each case: old age and approaching death. "When they reach the point where only a few branches leaf in the spring," explains Hugh Weatherlow '06, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, "we have to cut them down." Along East Avenue, young elms were interplanted several years ago against the day when the Ostrander landmarks must all disappear.

University Station WHCU did yeoman service during the flood emergency last month. When Elmira's radio station was washed out, WHCU set up a special line to the stricken city and broadcast flood news, health precautions, calls for help, and other emergency announcements until 1:30 a.m., receiving permission from the FCC to operate beyond the sundown sign-off. In thirty hours, twenty-two remote broadcasts from Elmira were aired. Gannett newspapers in Elmira brought their staffs and printing to The Ithaca Journal during the emergency.

Women's organizations of the University invited Faculty and students to a reception for Dean Sarah G. Blanding, president-elect of Vassar College, in Balch Hall May 16. President and Mrs. Day headed the receiving line.

Woodford Prize oration this year was by David M. Geiger '46 of Brooklyn, who was president of the model United Nations here. His subject was "The War Goes On: Spain, a Test Case."

Omicron Nu, known as the ne plus ultra of "pre-weds" (i.e. Senior honor society in Home Economics), has elected Joan D. Auchter of Haddonfield, N. J.; Caroline N. Bayne, daughter of Professor Thomas L. Bayne, Jr. '23, Rural Education, and Mrs. Bayne '25; Carol D. Cleveland of Elmira; Priscilla G. Edgerton of Nantucket, Mass.; Ann M. Haenseler of New Brunswick, N. J.; and two graduate students, Julia E. Haines of Moncton, N. B., Can., and Juniata E. Strom of Richland, Mo.

Book and Bowl has elected William R. Irwin, English, president, Peter Detmold '45 secretary, and Professor James Hutton '24, Classics, treasurer. The society's perennial treasurer, Professor Morris Bishop '14, Romance Literatures, resigned and was named treasurer-emeritus, with provision that this office does not exempt him from paying dues.

Student board of CURW has elected as its president for next year Ruth E. Osborn '47, daughter of Mrs. Robert C. Osborn (Agda Swenson) '20 of Ithaca. Leland R. Ives '49 of Corinth is secretary.

Vol. 1, No. 1 of "I and LR News" appeared on the Campus May 10, a four-page paper published by and for students of the School of Industrial and Labor Relations.

Special student at the University this term, sent here by the State Department to learn Russian, is Terry B. Sanders, Jr., a Yale alumnus who is third secretary of the United States Embassy in London.

VICTIMS of an apparent hoax, 150 Hill-dwellers, ranging from Dean to Freshmen, went to Goldwin Smith Hall June 4 to hear a lecture on "Hypnotism and the Soviet" by "Dr. Nicolai Vyalov, noted Russian educator and lecturer," who never showed up. Posters on ivied walls, 200 cards mailed to Faculty and fraternities, and publicity sent to press and radio by the hoodwinked Department of Public Information all succeeded in advertising the affair. Fabricated sponsor, "the Lucas Foundation," was said to have been "rather inactive since the beginning of the war, presenting Dr. Vyalov after a seven-year lapse." Biographical material, sent to Public Information on Willard Straight Hall stationery, stated that the invisible Nicolai "was educated at the Sorbonne, taught at the University of Heidelberg, and was engaged during the war in orientation and indoctrination work with the Red Army." The lecture was to be "followed by a question and answer period," and the first part of this, at least, the audience supplied!

Mary H. Donlon '20, Alumni Trustee and chairman of the New York State Workmen's Compensation Board, initiated a series of annual lectures named in her honor in Olin Hall, June 4. She spoke on "Labor's Disability Risk." The Donlon Lectures are endowed with the proceeds of a testimonial dinner to her arranged by leaders of industry, labor, and the professions in New York City last December. The fund was given for the School of Industrial and Labor Relations for lectures in her field of workmen's compensation.

Other lectures: "Gears and Their Lubrication," by Asa R. Purdy '15 and John C. Gibb '24, lubricating engineers with Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., May 27; "The Association Between Pastures, Parasitic Worms, and Farm Stock," by E. L. Taylor of the British Ministry of Agriculture, June 3; "Industrial Design," by Julian G. Everett '24 of New York City, to Seniors in Architecture and Engineering, June 7.

Cornell Political Union, a new student organization, debated publicly "immediate Federal limitation of the right to strike" May 30, importing Professor George W. Taylor of the University of Pennsylvania, former member of the War Labor Board, to uphold the negative.

Visitor at the University in mid-May, for the first time in sixteen years, was Ramon C. Concepcion '27 from the Philippines. A sugar planter on Occidental Negros, he was a fugitive from the Japanese captors of the Islands during the war and was wounded during his liaison activities with guerilla forces.

Prizes: Richard G. Younge '46 of Brooklyn, as the Senior "who has shown the greatest ability and progress in a combined study of the Classics and English," wins the Bess Barlow Cohan Prize of $100. Patricia R. Kinne '46, daughter of Mrs. Frederick P. Kinne (Olive Monroe) '20 of Chappaqua, the Senior woman majoring in French who has the best four-year record "with especial reference to facility of expression in French," wins the Juliette MacMonnies Courant [16] Prize of $40. Emmanuel M. Pollack '49 of Millerton wins the Forestry Prize of $40 for his essay on "Conservation or National Decline: America's Alternative."

The Faculty

H. Edward Babcock, chairman of the Board of Trustees, will be the principal speaker at the annual meeting of the Dairymen's League Co-operative Association Inc., in Syracuse, June 20.

Dean Sarah G. Blanding of Home Economics, president-elect of Vassar, received the honorary LLD at Skidmore College, May 26, and at Russell Sage College, June 2.

Colonel Leonard C. Urquhart ★ '09, former professor of Civil Engineering, became chief of the engineering division of the US Engineers District Office in Honolulu, Hawaii, this June. Since he left the University in 1940, he has been in the Army Engineers' services. Last year he became chief of the Engineering Division, Office of the Chief of Engineers, Washington, D. C.

Professor Stanley J. Brownell, Animal Husbandry Extension, left June 1 for Berlin, Germany, to be "chief of livestock and meats" in the Office of Military Government for Germany. In this capacity he will establish and administer a program to develop all classes of livestock in Germany and a meats program in the food and agricultural branch. Professor Brownell will be absent from the University one year.

Professor Thomas W. Mackesey, assistant dean of the College of Architecture, represented the University at a conference of the Association of Collegiate Schools of Architecture in Miami, Fla., May 5-6. He also attended a convention of the American Institute of Architects in Miami, May 5-10, as a representative of the Central New York chapter of the AIA.

Lieutenant Colonel Derrill M. ★ Daniel, PhD '33, former assistant professor of entomology at the Geneva Experiment Station, is with the Army Ground Forces in Washington, D. C. Throughout the war, he was with the First Division, participating in three D-Day landings: Africa, Sicily, and Normandy. He was also in France, Belgium, and Germany, in the most important battles. Colonel Daniel's decorations include the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star with six clusters representing seven citations for gallantry in action (a number equalled only by General Douglas MacArthur), Bronze Star with clusters, eight campaign stars, and the Belgian Fourragere for two citations for gallantry at Mons and The Battle of the Bulge. While on a recent vacation with his family at Reed Point, Colonel Daniel visited his former colleagues at the Station.

Professor John G. Kirkwood, Chemistry, has received a Meritorious Civilian Service Award for his services as a consultant to the research and development division of the Bureau of Ordnance. Signed by Vice Admiral George F. Hussey, Jr., chief of the Bureau, the citation states that Professor Kirkwood's research was "especially valuable in solving various technical and operational problems. . . . contributed to the understanding of the underwater explosion waves, underwater damage and blast waves in the air," and that the new theoretical methods developed by him "have made possible preliminary calculations which have guided the whole program of the underwater experimental investigations of the Bureau of Ordnance, at the Naval Mine Warfare Test Station, Solomons, Md., and at the Underwater Explosives Research Laboratory, Woods Hole, Mass."

Professors John W. MacDonald and Arthur E. Sutherland, Jr. of the Law School were appointed May 20 to the New York State Bar Association's committee on improvement in judicial administration. Professor MacDonald is executive secretary and director of research of the State Law Revision Commission.

Professor E. Franklin Phillips (above), Apiculture, shows to Mrs. Ina Slaff '49, journalism student, an historical volume from the University's library on bee culture, probably the world's largest. The only competitor, if it is still there, is a large collection at a university in Berlin.

Professor Phillips has been mainly responsible for the library, having acquired such valuable collections as that of Moses Quinby, first commercial beekeeper in the United States, and the Langstroth Memorial Collection. He induced beekeepers to contribute to a fund that made the library possible. They agreed to dedicate one colony of bees to the University; money from honey produced by these special colonies went into the fund until each beekeeper had donated fifty dollars. Professor Phillips's ambition right now is to obtain that collection in Berlin.

Professor Thomas A. Ryan '33, Psychology, will teach in the summer session of the University of Wisconsin at Madison.

Lieutenant Colonel Walter E. ★ Hopper, Jr. '37, senior Infantry instructor at the University, 1941-42, is assistant to the counsel, Overseas Operations Division, General Motors Corp., 1775 Broadway, New York City. A graduate of the advanced course, the Infantry School, and of the Command and General Staff School, he recently returned from the European Theatre of Operations where he served in England, France, Belgium, Luxembourg, Switzerland, and Germany. His last assignment was as law member of the general court martial in London which heard the first of the Lichfield cases, involving the alleged brutal treatment of American soldiers at the 12th Reinforcement Depot in Staffordshire, Mrs. Hopper (Jeannette Rose) '41, and their daughter, Nancy Cameron, live at 14 Gesner Avenue, Nyack.

Professor Leland D. Spencer '18, Marketing, was present at a hearing on proposed amendments to the New York Metropolitan Milk Marketing Order, May 15 in Utica.

After three years of work, Professor Henry M. Munger '36, Plant Breeding and Vegetable Crops, has succeeded in purifying a strain of beans that had lost its power of producing a bean of standard size and shape in the last quarter-century. Originally, in 1920, Professor Walter H. Burkholder, PhD '17, Plant Pathology, bred a strain of the Perry Marrow variety which was pure and resistant to the fungus disease, anthracnose. Since that time, it had become mixed with other varieties. By selective breeding, Professor Munger has purified the strain.

A daughter, Mary Sterling Detweiler, was born May 9 in Ithaca to Professor A. Henry Detweiler, Architecture, and Mrs. Detweiler.

News of the Alumni

Personal items and newspaper clippings about all Cornellians are earnestly solicited

'00 LLB—John T. McGovern, president of the board of directors of the Gramercy Boys' Club in New York City and president of the Manhattan and Bronx area council of Boys' Clubs of America, presided at a National Conference on Juvenile Delinquency, sponsored by Boys' Clubs of America, in New York City May 2. In the evening at a ceremony presided over by Lieutenant General Hugh A. Drum, he was given the Meritorious Service Medal and bars (for five years each) for thirty years' service to boys. One of his citations states that "under his wise guidance, the Boys' Club made swift strides in the welfare field and stands today pre-eminent among those agencies that endeavor to care for the needs of boys in a great city." It also commends him for his efforts to many other causes other than that of boys. McGovern's article, "The Trend of Arbitration," appeared in the April Bulletin of the New York State Bar Association. Another article on arbitration was in the May Bulletin, and a third will be in the July issue of the American Arbitration Magazine.

'07 MD—Dr. Thomas F. Sorority Pledges

UNIVERSITY'S thirteen sororities ended their two-week formal rushing period March 28, pledging 160 undergraduate women, all but five of them second-term Freshmen.

This is the third Class to be rushed according to the Pan-Hellenic Council's deferred rushing plan, whereby no Freshman woman may be approached by a sorority until her second term. Each chapter this year had a quota of twenty-one pledges, but none of the thirteen filled this quota during the formal period; vacancies may be filled by informal rushing throughout the term. Only 291 women registered as prospective pledges this year, compared to 440 in 1945.

All pledges listed below are second-term Freshmen unless otherwise designated:

Send Us Your Son

Former residents recommend Sheldon Court to their sons, brothers, and other young men they know.

Boys like the pleasant, well furnished rooms and suites in this traditional dormitory. Today many young men are asking for "Dad's old room."

Sheldon Court is unique in having a Student Self-Governing Board. This plan has great merit in giving the boys a certain freedom coupled with realization of their responsibility to Cornell, to the boys with whom they live, to their all-important study program, and to themselves.

HAYNES STELLITE

Makes Dies Last Longer and Saves Refitting Time

This crankshaft trimming die is hard-faced at points of wear with HAYNES STELLITE. It trimmed from 150,000 to 155,000 pieces before it was returned to the die shop for touching up. Before the practice of hard-facing these trimming dies was adopted, they produced less than 500 pieces before it was necessary to refit them.

HAYNES STELLITE increases the life of all types of dies because it resists abrasive wear even on hot work. Maintenance costs are reduced—as dies have to be changed less frequently, and, also, you can refit a hard faced die in less time than is required for refitting a plain steel die.

For further information on savings that can be made by hard-facing with HAYNES alloys, write for the 100-page book, "Hard-Facing With Haynes Stellite Products."
