Law School

The primary function of the Law School is to prepare attorneys for both public and private practice who are equipped to render skillful professional service and who are thoroughly conscious of the important role played by the law as a means of social control. The curriculum is designed to prepare students for admission to the bar in all American states and territories.

Ordinarily a student who is admitted to the Law School must have a baccalaureate degree from an approved college or university. The course of study leading to the degree of Doctor of Law (J.D.) covers three academic years. A limited number of students will be admitted to a program of study leading to the degree of Doctor of Law (J.D.) "with specialization in international affairs."

There are combined graduate degree programs with the Graduate School of Business and Public Administration, the College of Arts and Sciences, the Department of City and Regional Planning, and the School of Industrial and Labor Relations, as well as a special opportunity for highly qualified undergraduates in the College of Arts and Sciences to register in the Law School during their senior year.

The graduate program of the Cornell Law School is a small one, to which only a few students are admitted each year. The LL.M. degree (Master of Laws, Legum Magister) and the J.S.D. degree (Doctor of the Science of Law, Jurisprudentiae Scientiae Doctor) are conferred. A small number of law graduates may also be admitted as special students, to pursue advanced legal studies without being degree candidates.

For further information, refer to the Announcement of the Law School, obtainable from the Director of Admissions, Myron Taylor Hall.
